The Romper Shoe FOR CHILDREN Your own good judgment demands for the children good shoes of good appear-The "Romper" Shoe is a creation of our own. Our long experience in careing for children's feet gives us an insight into their requirements. The "Romper" Shoe is made on natural shaped lasts, allowing plenty of room for the toes and still snugly hugging the instep, so that there is no danger of slipping at heel or foot pushing forward. The "Romper" Shoe is by all odds the very best wearing shoe on the market. This latter point is worthy of the consideration of parents. The "Romper" Shoe is intended for children from three to twelve years of age, and comes in all styles and all leathers. THE COURSE IN THE PUBLIC SCHOOL S

An Interesting Contribution to The Discussion on More Practical and Thorough Training

Editor Times-Star:-Sir:-Apropos the discussion on Fads and Fancies and the "Three R's" in the ommon schools, in recent issues of the Globe. I enclose an article on the 'Springfield Test," which might be of interest, if you care to use it in the

Yours truly, EDUCATOR.

THE "SPRINGFIELD TEST"
RE THE THREE R'S In 1890 there were discovered in the attic of the high school building in Springfield, Mass., several old sets of examination questions that had been written in the fall of 1846. They conwritten in the fall of 1846. They consisted of printed questions in geography and arithmetic with answers written on the printed sheets, and written tests in spelling and penmanship. Two of these tests were later (1905) given to 245 ninth-grade pupils in the Springfield schools, and the results were carefully compared with the results of the tests of 1846. The following is the comparison: Spelling Number of pupils who took tests 85
Average per cent cor-

class, mis-spe. M seventeen or more words. Comparisons of the geography and penmanship were even more conclusive evidence of the superiority of the ive evidence of the superiority of the pupils of 1905 over those of 1846. In commenting upon the results of these tests, Dr. Gregory says:

"The system of today is immeasurably ahead of the school system of the past. The growth has been steady. Whatever may be said against the 'enrichment' of the course of study, its 'frills and fads,' the contention that the essentials, so called, have suffered in comparison with the past, falls flat. It does not follow that these essentials are taught as well as they should be yet. Perhaps they would have advanced more but for the 'frills' and 'fads' aforesaid. This is an open question. But no argument to that effect can be based on the superiority of the schools of the past. That is not an open question.

But in the wiser criticism the tendency is not to attack the curriculum because of the newer things that have come in to enrich child life, but because of the persistence in it of subjects for which our age has no need, to the partial exclusion of subjects for which there is a general social demand. The general criticism all along the line is that the subjects are out of touch with life. The quarrel is not with arithmetic as a uarrel is not with arithmetic, as a chool subject, but with what is likely school subject, but with what is likely to be taught as arithmetic—operations and methods the utility of which ceases when school is out.

Dr. Leonard P. Ayres tells of having been called upon to examine the eighth-grade arithmetic text-books in a New England city. From the book in use he made up an examination, which he persuaded a number of successful business and professional men to try. These were men earning from three to fifteen thousand dollars a year. None of them passed the examination. The highest mark recorded was 25 per cent. There was one problem in paper buying that seemed particularly troublesome. Two of the men who took the examination were directly engaged in publishing work, and purchased many tons of paper every year. Both failed on the paper question, and both gave the same excuse: "They had known how to do that when they left school, but having had no use for it since, they had forgotten it." They further explained that the terms used in the paper problem had not been in use in the trade for the last fifty years. There is an interesting epilogue to this story. Dr. Ayres gave thy same arithmetic examination to his fifteen-year old office girl, just from the eighth-grade. She received 75 per cent. marks on the examination.—The Schoolmaster.

A fire which threatened serious damage, broke out in the North End last might a little after midnight. The fire was discovered in a barn owned and used by A. Irvín, in Dunham street. Three barns and a house were damaged, The fire extended from one barn to the other and finally to the home of Henry Seely. The entire damage, to the extent of $600, is covered by Insurance.
