Former federal minister of agriculture has definitely declined to accept the nomination as leader of the Conservative party in the Province of British Columbia.

FLAPPER TO JOIN EXTINCT DODO

Fall Fashion Show Foretells Long Skirts, Curis and Big Hats.

New York, Aug. 15.—For some time insistent rumors of long skirts and long hair have been sounding the approaching extinction of the flapper, but never before has the writing on the wall appeared so clearly as it did at the fall fashion show of the Retail Millinery Association, held at the Hotel Astor.

For an hour and a half long, almost skirts almost touching the floor, enormous drooping hats with languid veils and plumes, and large, luxurious fur scarves, were piled up the evidence which indicated that the flapper, bobbed hat type of femininity is going to join the dodo before very long.

One looked in vain for a lingering trace of the flapper influence as the manikins from home after home paraded by. It was gone even from the young girl styles, where curis have once more come into their own, replacing the bob.

Really small hats forming a negligible proportion of the show. Enormous picture hats with sweeping brims and trailing adornments which carried out the downward line so often entirely to conceal the face on the right side, struck the keynote of the whole collection.

CASH MILLER ON THE RUSSIAN PROBLEM (Thrill Magazine)

"Them Russians is great people," remarked Cash Miller of the chain cigar store, as he laid aside his afternoon newspaper.

"Yes, they are remarkable, very remarkable, indeed, in several ways," replied the Old Customer gravely.

"I know one fact that could whirl all events on a nickel," Cash continued. "But whenever I read about 'em tryin' to pull a national comeback I think of my old friend Ignatz Polakoff an' the way he had the wise dope."

"Never forget the first time I lapped an' was comin' up from the boat with his complete family which reached from curb to curb. He was escortin' a brown trunk with a rope around it, an' balancin' a set of dinin' room furniture on one shoulder.

Didn't know what the total population of his family was as he couldn't count up that many in them days, an' all the boys over twelve was wearin' full whiskers.

"Ignatz gets himself a job manicin' floors in Schulmaker's pie garage down by the bridge, an' after he'd learned himself to party in the United States he cuts the whiskers, quits wearin' his hair bobbed off at the second knuckle, an' gets permuted to assistin' biscuit shooter at twelve homes' per."

"His hours was from 8 a. m. till midnight the follerin' week, with five minutes off on Thursdays.

"'Y' can't keep down a good man," he says, an' then he ups an' buys himself a soup an' fish, includin' a reversible shirt front. With this great social advantage he rises rapidly to the position of head waiter, with time off fer to eat hold back Ignatz after he reaches the level of them soup an' fish. Hard work name, as Pat Milton says, an' today they's a big nervous sign out in front that says Ignatz Polakoff, tables fer ladies, in wiggy letters, an' he's havin' his measure taken fer a summer home by the sea. He's got three off-spring in college an' Rosinka is studyin' fer to be a piano tuner by mail.

"An' I'll tell Lloyd W. George an' the world that Ignatz is our little bright-eyed son with the wise dope on Russia."

"Work, he says, 'is what them fella needs,' he says. 'An' as fer the Bulgshevcs,' he shouts, bicuit shooter at twelve homes' per. 'Why, Ignatz, I says, 'such language, an' you a business man,' tryin' to light another torch with the wrong end of a match. He's a wise cookoo, that Ignatz.

"Yes, work is a cure for many ills," observed the old customer thoughtfully. "An' another thing they need is some-run a country without politics any more'n' y' can run a bird store without canaries. 'Y' gotta have politicians to keep people from forgettin' what they want. Instead of them Russians lettin' go with dynamite whenever they see a white collar, an' blowin' up school houses in the interests of education, what they need is a torch light parade fer Murphy the people's choice fer mayor. Turn Petrolman O'Toole an' Hennessy loose with their night sticks when somebody wants to impose on the sacred rights of the horny-headed sons of toil. In the interests of progress an' prosperity, let 'em pick a representative board of Aldermen, I say, with Flannigan in the chair, standin' ready fer to throw it. That's my prescription.

"If you want to settle the Russian question so it won't bust out at the seams, let me an' Ignatz dope it, an' the rest of them 18-karat diplomats can wrap up their medals an' go home."

Otis White and Earle Broderick, who were sent up for trial several weeks ago on the charge of breaking and entering and stealing from the Douglas avenue filling station, chose a speedy trial yesterday afternoon before His Honor Judge Armstrong. Both defendants pleaded guilty to the charge against them and they were allowed to go under suspended sentences.
