The need of some more dredging on the West Side was illustrated last night when the good ship Western Extension, with a load of human freight, touched bottom when entering the West Side slip on the 8.40 trip. Perfect order prevailed among the passengers, who, for the most part though it was the terrific odor that stopped the boat. This impression was evidently shared by the captain on the bridge, for with words of encouragement he urged his charge on, but it was of no use. After the minutes of backing and filling an entrance was made by hugging the south side of the slip.

Last evening Chief Kerr of the fire department had No. 3 hose wagon with Foreman Oliver Thompson and some of the company hosemen on Chipmanis. Hill for the purpose of testing the new that this much needed plug was used, and the stream of water that wag thrown from it was in every way successful and most satisfactory to the chief. The new plug is a most necessary one to be situated in such an important district.

For some days past a construction train has been at work filling in the old turntable pit of the Shore Line at West. St. John. In ungdains a considerable quantity of mud rolls down on the beach and is washed away at high tide. The proprietor of the Blue Rock bathing houses claims that the water there has been made so dirty in this way as to be unfit for bathing, and that his business is being ruined. The terminal agent at West St. John, with whom he lodged a complaint, has taken the matter up and more care will be taken in unloading until the job is finished.

Another fire started in the dry room of the Cornwall cotton mill on Winter street yesterday and once more the succilient water service in the mill was the result of quenching the flames before serious damage was done. It was only a couple of days ago in the early morning that the department were called out for a blaze among the drying cotton and like yesterday, the aid of the department's hose was unnecessary, although the farmen were on thand quickly and ready to cope with the flames if needed.

The need of some more dredging on the hose was unnecessary, although the farmen were on thand quickly and ready to cope with the flames if needed.

Kerr, in a letter to the writer stated that he did not intend to run any more races in England after his race last Saturday with Cartmell at Belfast, but some Scottish papers have been received in which Kerr, Walker and Cartmell are announced as sure starting in some games at Ayr on Saturday, and it is thought that Kerr will take in these events if there is any chance of the South African being on hand.

Although he lost to the American on Saturday, Kerr has demonstrated that he is a better man than Caremell, although the difference is very small, while it is the general opinion that both Cartmell and Kerr are better men than Walker, owing to the fact that they are able to stand the wear and tear better and have shown faster time and more consistent performances.
