

THE BLOODY BATTLE OF GREY TOWN.
(Written for the Chronicle.)
Who glory in the Yankee Nation,
Come young and old of every station,
Once more his Victory preched upon her banner,
Brave Hollins has vindicated her honour,
From foes she has slain ever bold her,
For will she flag the black and rears the yellow?
Jubilate for the honour and renown
We've earned by the battle of Greytown.

Away down south where the sun would blister you,
Right on the road to San Francisco,
There's the San Juan—its like was never
For Aligators and yellow fever—
It runs from the Cordillera down
Where stood the city of Greytown;
Jubilate.

There the people mixed, white, black, and yellow,
Has produced a race most dually sallow,
But though they're little better than
They do not claim their independence,
And gain't they Smith's new shot out man,
Cause he ran down a boat and shot the boatman?
Jubilate.

A bold strain was taken by Consul Dorrland—
He knows very well that Pierce wants more land,
So he sent home a tale about his oppressors,
And called for vengeance on the oppressors,
Then Hollins was sent and Greytown was spotted,
For the Cycas was wrecked and her guns well shotted,
Jubilate.

Said Hollins "I come from the universal nation,
To demand an apology and reparation,
I give you till noon to answer my demand,
And sharp at the hour his guns did boom,"
Oh he makes no ado but his broadside in he pours,
And battered down the walls in about two hours,
Jubilate.

The people had all fled, scared or confounded,
No nobility was killed, and nobody wounded,
But the San Juan, how dreadful that late morn,
We killed seventy men, and nine algiers,
While we received no harm but of that kind
That comes from a gun is kicking up behind,
Jubilate.

Now it must be acknowledged a mistake we made
For many of our citizens had settled there to trade,
But we'll have our justice and our rights late ere a—
Although all the damages must fall on Uncle Sam,
For we'll take the whole country to make all right,
And the Cycas is ready for another bloodless fight,
Jubilate.

My lady comes at last,
Timid and stepping fast,
And hasten right forth,
With modest eyes downcast,
She comes—she's here—she's past—
May heaven go with her.

Timid and stepping fast,
And hasten right forth,
With modest eyes downcast,
