ste the states of woman ; it is, in one of the fruits of the agitation of the question of woman's rights. "HI lon's know," he says, "that anything was over more peeded then the suppression of dram drinking, considering that there are other things worse in the speciality ut not so universal; and this dram drinkog is the scourge of the household, and it comes with special weight on women, as being least able to take care of themdves. It is a kind of evil that has defied legislation; we have made laws retricting it, and we have lost in some repeets and gained in others; and now, Prints, Grey Cottons, Bleached Cotton under the providence of God, there has ricen a moral eyelone, a perfect tempest of influence." And then depicting the ess of the evil to be cured, and nature of the present movement, he needs:—"I tell you if Dante had proceeds:—"I tell you it Dante had lived in our time, among the punishments he would have invented for the damaed he would have thought of a sensitive, pure, proud, high strung nature, beguil-ed with the semblance of love into wed. nek, see her idol turn into clay and be bliged to spend her life with a fiend, a week after week, month after month, hog, week after week, month after month, year after year. I tell you there is no other hell needed. You can't imagine suffering greater than that. Have they no right to destroy the destroyer? This was not a plan thought of beforehand, it came by inspiration. There never was a thing more noble than this. Everyhedy ought to pray that there shall be great good done. I observe that all great unaccustomed movements, acting from enthusiasm, die away. It is a certain enthusiasm, die away. It is a certain kind of exaggerated faith that sees no obstacles, but all this power tends to be excessive and exhaustive. Now it is a great pity that this power could not be conomized and last a longer length of time. I am afraid it will be like a fire the prairie, burn away and leave no The news from the famine-stricker districts of Bengal is becoming more terrible. The Lieut.-Governor reporte fully 1.070,000 starving to death, and all the poorer classes beginning to feel the want of food, the villegers of Kast Tirhoot are slowly starving, and the outlook for the future is most ominous. From all appearances the famine has as- ation, we have been so successful sumed dimensions not expected, and the preparations made by the authorities for its alleviation seem inadequate. The Duke of Argyll, Secretary of State for India, it seems conferred on Lord North brook, the Governor-General, what he considered full powers to deal with the approaching calamity, and then seems Paul street, in the thriving village of Carlemind, till alarming news set enquiry go-Duke's in relegating the matter entirely to the Governor General was unfair to the latter, who needed some more exerience in Indian effairs, and besides had so many other things to attend to. It is to be feared the late Ministry allowed their concern about the elections veney, and it was considered remarkable that Mr. Grant Duff, late under-Secretary of State for India, in his election speech to his constituents, was silent on the subject of the famine, while dealing at great length with the topic of a third party. Lord Northbrook had been warn d. however, to expect rather an aggrain regard to the disaster, this being the esson taught by Indian famines' and to make the estimates and calculations ac pordingly. A detailed system of land carriage was being organized and efforts will be made to reach all the starving districts, but the question is whether this will be done in time to save the thousands of lives now in jeopardy.

ANOTHER EL DORADO,-At last we have a neglected gold region. The wonderful spot is located in Alaska, within ten miles of the principal city of the Territory-Sitka. The new El Dorado can be readily reached; its climate is represented to be mild and salubrions; yet, to the astonishment of the Alaskians gold-hunters do not come. There have been many places to which treasure-seekers rushed in great numbers, to the delight and profit of those who had goods to sell in the vicinity of the reputed gold and silver districts; but in most instance precious little of the precious metal was found, and the armies of amateur miners impoverished themselves and enriched those who had provisions, garments and mining implements to sell.

PICTURES OF POVERTY.-It is safe to say that there is not in the city of New York a block of tenement houses in which there are not many cases of destitution.

Not alone is there no food for little childborn there in quarters so wretched and sold that they would not be at shelters for brutes. Old people, whose memories steal back to happy days and happy homes, turn tremblingly on their pallets of atraw to answer the summons of the landlord's agent for rent; glance with long and painful scrutiny about the garret, longing for the discovery of some forgotten article that could be used to obtain the price of a single meal from
