

Avoid personality clashes: Searle

"The less this council gets into personalities, the better," declared Mayor Ron Searle this week at a general committee meeting.

Searle lost his temper during a general committee meeting and lectured Councillor Hazel McAllion on the need for this new council, elected in December, to avoid personality clashes.

Searle said he had made the utmost effort to be conciliatory. When the previous council took office in early 1974, "a certain atmosphere has already been set up," Searle said. He is determined that will not happen again, he said.

"Anytime you and I have a personal disagreement, let's talk about it outside," the mayor said. The last council had different philosophies and could not work together effectively, Searle said. "Let's try to make it work this time."

Searle's remarks followed criticism by Mrs. McAllion of what she said was his changed position on an item. At general committee, Searle spoke against a committee of the whole council for a task force on the city's administration. He favored a smaller, five-person task force.

Council pledges $8000 for Meadowvale mural project

The Mississauga Historical Society has a pledge of $8,000 from city council to kick off the $30,000 fund-raising project to house the Meadowvale mural.

Grant Clarkson of the historical society appeared before council to seek the funds this week.

He explained that the three-panel mural, which was painted by Canadian artist Fred Haines as a gift to the children of Meadowvale, in 1906, is in the final stages of an elaborate restoration process in Ottawa.

Federal experts are refurbishing the panels, which depict scenes of early pioneer and Indian life along the Credit River.

It will cost a total of $30,000 to put the mural in a climatically controlled, vandal-proof outdoor display case in the Village of Meadowvale, said Clarkson, who is the Chairman of the Credit Valley Conservation Authority (CVCA). The proposed location is on the front lawn of the present headquarters building of the CVCA at Derry Road and Mill Street.

"The mural we feel will add considerably to the historical atmosphere of Meadowvale, which as you know, Mississauga has said it wants to preserve as a historical village," Clarkson said. "The mural case would also fit in with the passive park nearby, the Meadowvale Conservation Area," added Clarkson.

In response to questions about why the mural would not be placed in the proposed new CVCA administrative headquarters in Meadowvale, Clarkson said that a huge room would be needed for the 18-foot long mural; security forces would have to be hired, which would be more expensive; and viewing hours would be restricted.

With the outdoor case properly lit, viewing could take place "at any time of the day or night," he said.

"We've been wracking our brains since 1965 about what to do with this and we'd sure like to get it one place or the other."

Last year federal experts came to Meadowvale to remove the mural from the walls of the old Meadowvale School, where it had been since Haines painted it.

Mississauga's $8,000 donation is the first step in the campaign to raise the necessary funds. Now a Wintario grant of $8,000 will be applied for and a grant of $5,000 from the Ontario Heritage Foundation can be pursued.

Another $8,000 will be raised from the private sector through a citizen campaign, Clarkson said.

"We can't move until we get a decision from council though," he said.

With almost no discussion, council agreed to donate $8,000, subject to budget approval.

School-bus zone approved

A school-bus loading zone will be established in front of the Forest Glen Public School on Ponytrail Drive.

At the request of Peel Board of Education, general committee of council has agreed to designate the zone on the north side of Ponytrail Drive near Bridgewood Drive.

Ward 3 Councillor Frank Bean said the zone would relieve a "critical problem" in his ward. He asked when the signs could be erected, putting the loading zone into effect.

He was told by City Engineer William Taylor that it will likely be two weeks to a month before the signs can be

They say the answer to your problems is just around the corner. Why not take a walk and find out.

Meeting set on report

City councillors will consider the report of the independent commission on ward boundaries next Wednesday beginning at 9 a.m.

Two members of the commission, chairman Blake Goodings and vice-chairman Melvin Zorn, will be on hand to discuss the report.

The commission, which also reported on the salaries of elected officials, presented its report last fall.

Council has received many briefs from ratepayer groups discussing the ward boundaries proposed by the commission.

In order to allow redistribution of wards and the changes necessary to the voter list in time for the next municipal election in the fall of 1978, council must make its decision quickly.

The city clerk has estimated it will take 18 months to complete the changeover to new ward boundaries.

The public is welcome to attend the meeting on Wednesday.
