GERMAN COMMENT ON THE WAR

A NEWCOMER to the symposium of German culture brings the news that the Kaiser Wilhelm der Grosse was not sunk by the High-flyer, but by her own captain after he had exhausted all his ammunition.

By way of taking the winds out of the sails of what the "Posener Tageblatt" calls "that unwieldy creation of Lombard, the British Fleet," this is not bad as a first flight in the airy realms of journalistic fiction.

"FOOTBALL KICKING LOUTS."

This, however, is not the Posen paper's only claim to admission to the select inner circle of the Ancient Order of Ananias and Sapphira. It goes on to say:—

"Apart from a few piratical raids on defenceless German colonies, the enemy's much-extended squadrons, have not a single deed of daring to their credit. Britain's invincibility at sea is but a bubble. It needs but the thrusts from the good German weapon—in other words, the shots from our mighty naval arm—to shatter it and dissipate it in vanishing vapours.

"The whole British Empire, in fact, is but a bubble. Its citizens, too smug and self-sufficient to be patriots, now hurry hither and thither like scared mice because of the loudly uttered wrath of the German Michael.

"Their battalions of football kicking louts are melting away before the fire of German artillery. Already so many thousands of these miserable wretches have been dragged away from their slum hovels that every day more drinking shops in Whitechapel and the Borough streets are putting up their shutters.

"And it is these beer and gin sodden youth, now being hurried by Kitchener to the slaughter, that are to save the British Empire from the onslaughts of doughty German warriors, beside whom the Roman legionaries can only be considered as children for bravery and military skill!

"Let German citizens take courage. Among the signs and omens which portend the early break-up of the crazy cardboard fabric of the British Empire is the fact that it should have been necessary to utilise the degenerates of London slumland as food for German shells and howitzers.

"Patience, German citizens, and you shall see the glorious imperial German banner floating from the towers of Windsor!"

"HOWLING JACKALS" ALSO

Germany's leading financial organ, the "Berliner Boersen Courier," grows eloquent on what it styles "the lamentable decay of public life in Britain," a condition of affairs which it attributes to "the trivialities, the flippant falsehoods, and the childish fabrications which now fall so lightly from the lips of responsible Ministers." We are further assured that:—

"By joining France and Russia against Germany, Britain has backed the wrong horse. Life the thief she is, she has, thief-like, overreached herself in her cupidity.

"The purse-proud British fool with a monumental greed of which a super-shylock would be ashamed, would fain lay his sacrilegious hands on German trade. How mistaken he is in this respect John Bull will find out to his bitter cost after the war.

"Germany's commercial reputation in the oar is so strong that a cowardly jackal tricks can rob her of her well-deserved successes. Germany's finances are sound, and her manufacturers are the most appreciated in the world.

"When John Bull, the howling jackal, shall have received the full measure of the punishment which the German Michael has destined for him, he will, so far from desiring to set his fangs in Germany's industry, be only too thankful to slink back into the innermost fastness of his island lair, a wild beast with drawn claws.

"He will be incapable henceforth of prowling around under cover of hypocritical protestations to steal from other people the property to seize which in open fight he has neither the pluck nor the ability."

AND "SONS OF BEASTS."

The "Hamburger Nachrichten," starting with the modestly uttered assumption that "Europe's fate lies in the hands of the German woman," admonishes the women of the Fatherland to follow the example of their distinguished compatriot, the poetess, Ida Boy-Ed, and like her, give expression to the bitter hatred which they must all feel against the "traitor Britons" who have dared to array the "yellow Japanese monkeys" against the flower of Germany.

"The German women," it says, "are beings too gentle, of a texture altogether too delicate, to support the idea of war. But in so far as the present war is concerned our women in their millions welcome it with joy, because they recognize that it is a struggle against envious, hating, and hateful foes.

"German mothers have never brought forth such wild beasts as these poison-spreading enemies. The sons of German mothers are formed in the image of God of the God who brought the sword into the world and entered into friendship with the Centurion of Capernaum. Not so the sons of French, English, Russian and Belgian mothers. They are made of other material.

"By the use of terrible, lacerating bullets, by murdering and mutilating wounded German warriors, and by playing the hypocrites' part by means of the white flag, their sons have shown themselves to be beasts and the sons of beasts.

"Between such bitterly opposing forces as those of the good, the noble the uplifting and the evil, the vile and the degrading, the battle must go on until the end, until their tears and their prayers shall have moved High Heaven to grant the Germans victory."

STEBAURMAN'S OINTMENT

Dear Sir—
I was a cripple for 25 years, and had several doctors treating me; also spent some time at the hospital, but all failed to do me any good.

I am glad to say that "Your Ointment," &c., has made a perfect cure of me. Previous to this I was obliged to walk around on crutches. So I advise all sufferers to give his medicines a trial and prove for themselves my statements.

Yours truly,

cepted idea that the name of Britain is synonymous with fair play.

"John Bull's fair play," the writer declares, "has its limits within the net of the lawn tennis court; he never carries it along with him into the arena of world politics. This, indeed, is no more than could be expected in a land where that devil's proverb which was brewed in Satan's witch-kitchen, 'My country, right or wrong,' expresses the creed of the people.

"The British, indeed, are really nothing more than animals. In the field of morals or of culture they are as little in their element as a swan on a mountain top.

"John Bull's crazy playing fields never have been, and never can be, the source of ethical culture. Let the young German sheathe his breast with the strength of an iron will, with the grim determination to rain crushing blows on the wretches who oppose him; but let him fling away the indiarubber morality of 'fair play,' for it is but the vile dragon venom with which St. George's shining armour was bespattered.

"In this day of wrath every man in the German Fatherland must don the knightly armour and transform himself into another St. George. For the dragon Albion with whom we are wrestling is a much more fearsome beast than that of the ancient legend.

"It is a creature from the blackest pit of the Satanic underworld, which deserves no pity. On it no chivalry must be wasted. It must be crushed until it returns to its original infernal elements."

APOLOGY TO THE PHARISEES.

THE "Kölnische Zeitung," with fine irony and its tongue in its cheek, descends on the "belt of lies and falsifications" by which people are being deceived:—

"Although no further proof at all is necessary," the Journal remarks, "Britain's action with regard to German bills of exchange adds striking testimony to the villainous, mean, huckstering spirit which has animated Britain in every step she has taken in her history—this false, despicable Albion, which never tires of posing to the gallery of Europe as the protector of the sanctity of international treaties! But, despite her bluff and bluster, Britain knows full well that by her piratical economic war she is digging her own grave.

"She now hopes, by means of beautiful speeches and solemn assurances, to throw dust in the eyes of the nations, and make them believe in the purity of her motives. If her attempts fail, as they are bound to do, we shall once again be treated to the edifying spectacle, already too frequently reproduced, of lying, hypocritical Britain standing on the European stage and beating her breast with more than Pharisaical energy. Indeed, we humbly apologise to the Pharisees for insulting them by comparing them to the British reptiles, besides which the much-maligned, self-righteous Jerusalemites are white-robed angels.

"The deceit, the utter shamelessness of British politics, however, cannot be too often repeated in the public Press. There are still too many in Germany and in other countries who have not the clear idea they ought to have of the thick belt of lies, falsifications, and prejudice which the British have wound round the world."

Couldn't Eat a Half Meal.
St. John's, Oct. 12, 1914.

I have been troubled with indigestion for a number of years, in fact I have been so bad I couldn't eat half a meal of anything.

A friend advised me to try A.I.C. and one half pint bottle cured me. I couldn't believe I could be cured in such a short time and now I can eat anything, and food does not trouble me in the least. I think I am perfectly cured, I haven't felt indigestion this month.

I recommend this medicine to all sufferers from indigestion. You are at liberty to use my name, and anyone not believing this statement can write or consult me personally.
