PORT ARTHUR TEAM SWAMPED

Kitchener Win First Allan Cup Elimination Game by 20 to 2.

PT. ARTHUR DEFAULTS

Toronto, March 7.—Lacking all of the qualifications that go to make a good hockey team, Port Arthur, champions of the Thunder Bay League, met Kitchener at the Arena in the first of the Eastern games of the Allan Cup elimination series and were beaten by 20 to 2. The game was scheduled as the first of a home-and-home series, with the total goals on the round to count. Port Arthur's showing, however, was so disappointing in the initial game that the management voluntarily offered to default Saturday night's game. Needless to say, this offer was accepted and an exhibition game between Dentals, last year's O.H.A. senior champions, and Kitchener, this year's winners, will be played on Saturday night.

Kitchener Easily the Best. Kitchener were so much superior in every department of the game that the majority of the spectators left after the second period. Port Arthur were easily out-skated, out-checked and out-maneuvred throughout the three periods of play. Kitchener scored six goals in the opening period, nine in the second period and five in the final period, holding Port Arthur to one goal in the second and third periods. Port Arthur's Lamentable Showing. Hiller, Parkes and Solomon of the Port Arthur team, and the defence play of Karges and Truschinski was impenetrable to the Port Arthur attacks. It is only fair to say that Kitchener did not play their best game, due to lack of real opposition. The teams: Kitchener (20)—Goal, Hainesworth; defence, Karges and Truschinski; centre, Hiller; wings, Parkes and Solomon; substitute—Leroux. Port Arthur (2)—Goal, Gerrard; defence, L'Heureux and Rabideau; centre, Cattani; wings, Service and Gray. Substitute—Meyers. Referee—Lawson Whitehead.

ANCESTOR LIVED REAL CRUSOE LIFE

Lure of Service in Merchant Marine Never Stronger Than Now

The lure of service in the merchant marine was never stronger than now, and it is noticed by officials that many of the candidates for places aboard ship are members of old sea-going families.

Among the many young Americans now applying to the United States Shipping Board's recruiting service for training as deck officers there appeared the other day one named Ashton, who was accepted and placed in a navigation school.

He said the dangers of the submarine had no terrors for him and that he came of a family of mariners who in earlier times had fed many dangers from wars, pirates at sea and were ever ready to sail again.

To prove his statement the candidate produced a book detailing the adventures of one of his ancestors, who was seized by pirates, escaped from them, and lived nearly two years like Robinson Crusoe on a desert island but never regretted that he chose the life of a sailor.

This was Philip Ashton of Marblehead, Mass., whose adventures were so extraordinary that the Rev. John Barnard made the young man's tale return home the subject of a sermon from the text, "If it be so, the God whom we serve is able to deliver us from the burning fiery furnace, and he will deliver us out of thy hands, O King."

Philip Ashton commanded a fishing schooner with a crew of four men and a boy, and when harboring for Sunday near Cape Sable, Nova Scotia, he was seized by one, New Low, a pirate, who also took a dozen other peaceful fishing craft. Putting the prisoners aboard his own vessel to be sent to Boston, Low transferred his crew to a Marblehead schooner and started again. Ashton was pressed into his service the point of a pistol.

The pirates ranged the seas eastward and off the Azores captured a large Portuguese junk. In this with the schooner in company, they sailed to the "Triangles," about 40 leagues to the eastward of Surinam. Here they lost the junk, which filled and sank while being cargued for cleaning.

Resuming their cruise in the schooner, they took several prizes in the West Indies. They then proceeded to the Gulf of Honduras where they landed on an island, built huts and proceeded to spend their time in carousal.

Ashton had been watchful for a chance to escape, and here once presented itself. The cooper being sent ashore on another island with a message to get water, took Ashton with him.

The young man helped fill the water casks, but at the first opportunity slipped into the bush. The pirates searched for him in vain. For five days the young American sat at the end of the woods and watched the island of the pirates. On the fifth day their ship sailed away and he felt safe, even though alone on an island.

Clad only in "an Onanburg frock and trousers, a milled cap, but neither shirt, shoes, stockings nor anything else," the youth lived alone five months on this island. He found it to be well watered with high hills and deep valleys, in which were many fruit trees. He lived on figs, coconuts and "an orange oval shaped, of a brownish color without and red within."

There were wild pigs on the island and turtles on the beach, but he had no knife or weapon and no means of making fire for cooking meat.

One day the young Crusoe saw a small canoe approaching the island. As it grounded on the beach a native of North Britain, well advanced in years, of a grave and venerable aspect, who had "lived for years with the Spaniards," but had fled from them when persecuted.

Too Weak to Travel in Canoe. For three days the Scot lived on the island with the lad. Then he started for another island, but wild hogs. A storm came up and Ashton never saw him again.

But the youth now had a knife and a flint, and life to him became endurable. He roasted the delicate flesh of the tortoise and regained strength on the diet it afforded.

Three months passed. Then the young sailor wandering on the beach found the old man's canoe stranded. It was another, but being chased away by buccaners he kept on, finally reaching the island of Roatan, where he lived along seven months more, being finally joined by a party of Englishmen, refugees from the mainland. The party was attacked by pirates, but Ashton and his companion escaped in a small boat and succeeded in finding an English vessel among the islands of Honduras Gulf.

Transferred finally to a Yankee ship, Ashton reached home in 1722, having been absent two years ten months and fifteen days.

FOY WAR MODELS. Cleveland, O., March 7.—Exact models in miniature of United States war vessels and transports, supplied with electric propelling machinery and complete batteries, manufactured by the department of justice agents here, and their manufacturer, a Cleveland resident, is being investigated by studying the models, officials pointed out, submarine commanders would be able to recognize the originals, regardless of any attempt to camouflage.
