German Troops, in Retreat From Belgium, Crossed the Province of Limburg—Entente Powers to Make Remonstrance to Holland

By Courier Leased Wire.

PARIS, Nov. 21.—Bulletin.—The allied governments have decided to send an official protest to the Dutch government against the violation of Holland's neutrality as a result of her permitting German troops to cross the province of Limburg in their retreat from Belgium, according to The Echo de Paris.

Limburg is a long irregular province of Holland, nearly 103 miles in length. For 28 miles from its lower extremity it lies between the province of Limburg, Belgium and Rhine provinces. Germany. At the widest point in this region it is nineteen miles between Belgian and German soil. Just north of Sittard, Limburg province narrows down to less than five miles. It was reported on November 15 that German troops returning to Germany from Belgium to Germany had to cross the Dutch provinces of Limburg, and it is charged that the passage was made with the sanction of the Dutch authorities. NO REVOLUTION

ROTTERDAM. Sunday, Nov. 18.—There is no revolution in Holland, nor is there likely to be. Pister J. Troelstra, Socialist leader, speaking today at a great labor congres here not only repudiated violent methods, but admitted that his earlier bellicose utterances had resulted in a misunder-standing of his position. Extremists who would introduce Bolshevism are in a hopeless minority in Holland.

American Sub Chasers Carried British Crews to Undersea Boats

By Courier Leased Wire
On Board a British Cruiser, Wednesday, Nov. 20.—(6.45 p.m.)—(By the Associated Press).—Twenty German submarines, the first of the German fleet to surrender were taken over by the British thirty-six miles east of Harwich this morning. The transfer by Admiralty orders was made silently and without demonstrations. The German crews sullenly obeyed the orders that had been given them and to-night the U-boats lie moored under the British flag near a British submarine hase.

Buring the ceremony of surrender seaplanes flew low overhead, while American submarine chasers carried British crews to the undersea beats.

From the time the leading sub-"Slower, my last boats cannot keep up this speed," was the wireless message from a commander, who did not sign the name of his boat to the sign the name of his boat to the message.

The scene that began about sunrise when the first submarine was sighted until late this evening when the last one was rounded up, might have easily been mistaken for fleet manoeuvres. The work was carried out with such precision that there were few signs of the momentous significance of it all. The crews of the British ships lined the rails, but the Germans seemed to be liftle interested.

When the enemy boats were sighted there were only two or three members of each crew on deck, but as the details of the surrender worked out during the morning and early afternoon more Germans appeared from below decks. They appeared a sullen, but well fed lot when the first British officers stepped aboard and curtly saluted. British sailors followed the officers and the Germans went to the forward deck as the British and German officers went below to examine the first ship to be taken over. The German commander briefly answered questions regarding the machinery, but said nothing else, Evidence of strain and deep chagrin was unmistakably written on the faces of some enemy officers. The machinery was generally in good shape, but the vessels were extremely dirty and devoid of all unessentials. Everything indicating the names of the craft had been removed, although the Germans, conforming to instructions, readily told the names of their boats.

ficer quickly took charge.

The first submarine boat flew mills and it seemed a long time to the British sailors on the other vessels before the flag appeared. Finally, however, a white ensign was broken out. Even this last signal of total submission by Germany did, no cause the British sallors to disobethe order of silence, but the expression on the faces of the officers and
