The cause of the tragedy was a fire which originated in the engine house and trestle work at the mouth of the mine and shut off all exits. The fire alarm sounded about eleven o'clock last night for a blaze in the structures at the mine mouth directly across from Edmonton on the south side of the Saskatchewan River. The report soon spread that six men were shut in by the flames and the crowd watched the burning buildings from the hill above eagerly looking for the appearance of the town.
