THE POET'S DREAM. (By Eng. the Farmersville Boy). A worn-out post pulled all day long. For words to plead to great and gay. And sought with all his power to gain. These pleasing words, his words in vain. Long had he written verses short. To please the folks of every sort. In hope to gain their approbation. May be a small consolation. Till, wearied with conflicting thought. And weary with his restless rest. From his old room, he stepped out. Until, between midnight and day. In a quiet slumber lay. When in a dream brought to his sight An angel, smiling, said: "I am your muse; Leave off your rhyming; do not try To please the folks of every sort. They read your verses with a laugh. And never think of giving you aught. You cannot see (right well you know) Of any other golden poet. For if you cannot see, you would know it. How can you, then, at all expect An angel's aid, or any other aid? Much less the aid of a muse. Small poets thus are always fed. And never prize till they are dead; Then, like the rest, take care of your muse. She said, and vanished from his sight. He woke and lo! 'twas broad day-light."

Our readers must not expect the REPORTER next week, as it will not be issued. Read the notice at the head of the local column.

A Unique Fish Story. A very neat fish story comes from Bath. It is related by the Kingston Whig, James Young, which engaged in raising sunken timber from the bottom of the bay on Thursday last, found securely pinned to one of the logs thus raised a large pike weighing 12 1/2 pounds. The fish had run with such force against a large pointed silver attached to the log, that it had penetrated his body and held him prisoner. The fish was dead, but evidently had been so but for a very short time, as his flesh was hard and quite fresh. The strangest part of the whole affair was revealed on opening the pike, when, in addition to what is usually found in a fish, there tumbled out a four ounce coin silver watch, three rolling spoons, a pair of silver spectacles, and a white porcelain door knob. It is supposed that the pike had picked this hardware from the bottom, intending to use it as ballast in heavy weather.

The heavy showers of the past week have rendered the street leading to the station almost impassable, especially for heavy loads. The road will have to be graded and macadamized and the sooner the better. We think Mr. Hervey should assist in making the road passable from Harvey Cameron's corner to the station, as that is a new street opened especially for the benefit of the railway. A young mother should not be too ambitious to correct her children. She should begin at the bottom.

AT HOURS IN MACEDONIA. The Rev. Jas. Puller, president, and introduced the lecture by a few words of explanation as to the young man's life aim, and the object he had in giving lectures throughout the country.

Mr. Malloch, who appeared upon the platform as becoming native costume, is a young man of good presence, and at once won the favor of his audience. For one who four years ago was ignorant of our language, he is a student of the intricacies of English is truly wonderful. The pronunciation of some of the words proved a stumbling block to the young man, but the grammatical construction and idiomatic forms of the language seemed to be quite familiar.

The lecture opened with a brief geographical and historical account of Macedonia. The social condition of the country, was then referred to, with minute details, and we have no doubt, there was in the audience a general feeling of gratitude that the manners and customs of this country differ radically from the picture of Macedonia given in the Bible. The Macedonians professed the faith of the Greek Church, but they were Christians only in name. The priests were ignorant and superstitious; and a level of dense ignorance and a religion of formality and unmeaning ceremonies, was not to be wondered at. The people knew nothing of the Bible and its leaving influences, and the priests in some instances were just as ignorant. Mr. Malloch concluded with an interesting personal narrative of his own conversion, which was followed by his entering a native mission school, where he studied three years. Being resolved to preach the pure gospel of the Bible to his countrymen, and feeling the need of a superior education, he determined to come to this continent, where he could study under favorable conditions. Accordingly he disposed of everything he had, including twelve acres of land which realized only $40, and started with $60 to seek an education in a strange country. He landed in New York four years ago, with $10 in his pocket, and since that had been attending school and college, supporting himself by doing chores or any other odd jobs he could get. The present lecture tour had been undertaken in order to augment his very meagre resources, and enable him to prosecute his studies to that point which would enable him to preach in Macedonia with power and understanding.

The audience seemed well pleased with the lecture, and as the conclusion expressed their appreciation by a liberal collection.

NEWBORO. MONDAY, Aug. 20.—Peter Brady, father of Mrs. W. Shaver and Mrs. P. McKian, died suddenly last week. Will Driffin is home on a visit. Teacher McDonald and wife have returned from a four week's visit. The school opens on the 27th. Business is booming with the hotels. It is becoming difficult for them to accommodate all who are flocking to this favorite resort. John R. Wright has purchased a fine horse from Geo. Topping. John now has a matched team, and cuts quite a swell slashing around town in his railroad bus, with John Dan at the lines. D. Kory of Kingston, shipped a carload of cattle from here last week, for the United States market. Noah Whitmarsh is busy handling cattle for the Montreal market, as is also Herbert Lang.

A railroad man, while getting some good fish yarns in one of the hotels the other night, said he knew where bass could be caught in the Rideau the smallest of which would measure twenty inches, and that he would not bother with anything smaller. When asked his opinion, J. R. remarked that that was nothing. He used that sized fish for bait!

The "Ah, There" camp, composed of Kingston young men, have been rusticating here. They broke camp on Saturday. Come again boys. Mr. and Mrs. F. B. Cossitt, Mrs. Keefe, and Miss Buell, Perth; W. R. Carroll, Ottawa; Miss Tremaine, Buffalo; Miss Downes, Lachine; Miss Colter, Barrie; Mrs. S. K. Crawford, London, Eng.; H. B. McDevlin, Hamilton; H. Sinker and Dr. Ira Sinker, St. Catharines; W. C. Darley, Kingston; J. V. Price, Toronto; A. E. Slier, Morton; A. Reid, and John Karby, Montreal; R. Bond, Bradford; Judge C. A. Hess and C. Skinner, New York; and Hon. Wm. Mills, St. Louis, were registered at the Ottawa hotel last week. We have been able to get to get a partial list from the Ottawa House, which we give to Mrs. J. L. Forest, West Winchester; Miss Forest, Mrs. Girward and family, Quebec, and Mr. W. Washington, Montreal.

The Butler and family are camping on their island. It is said one of our young men, from his ear recently in the sun, he thinks it was caused by his hair being too long out. Come down, come down.
