Sly Habits in Their Mc

Their Sty Habits in Their Robinston of Danger Described.

The following is a fair sample of how cunningly crocodiles, in common with all other wild animals, can conceal themseives in moments of danger, says a writering the Westminster Gazette. After a happy week spent in the jungle with a friend of mine, we halted for breakftast, before making the last stage for headquarters and home, at a place for headquarters and home, at a place called Poynarhyn—Auglice, garden of flowers—and while at breakftast were amused by watching a number of crocodiles, about eight or ten, sunning themselves on the surface of a small lake, or tank, as it is there called, of about an acre in extent. A sudden thought struck me.

acre in extent. A sudden thought astruck me.

"I :ay, Murray, what fun it would be to 'ry and catch some of these beggars in a net." Bravo?" said he. "Let's try it presently. Appu, send the horse-keeper to the village and tell him to bring up all the men he can find and some long fishing nets. We will give a good santosum "(present).

The villagers scented some fun, and with the further stimulus of a santosum very soon turned up to the number of thirty. It was now Il o'clock and scorching hot, the air quivering over the bare, very soon turned up to the number of thirty. It was now 11 o'clock and scorching hot, the air quivering over the bare, sandy plain in which the pond was situ ated. It was breast deep, as we knew, including about one foot or eighteen inches of heavy mud. We tied two nets together so as to make one long enough to reach across the tank, about thirty yards, and this was heavily weighted along the bottom and arranged to be drawn with long ropes from each shore. Immediately behind the net came a line, and men about a yard apart, with long, pointed poles with which to prod the mud along the bottom of the net, and so drive the malingering gentlemen into proper position in front of the net. My friend and his servant (for all entered into the sport) followed close up to the second line. At it we all now went, splashing, shouting, stamping and hauling, but—a big but—not a sign did we find of a single one of the brutes that we had seen before us when we came to the edge of the water. We dragged that water backward and forward more than once, but our only reward was a deadly thirst that lasted us till late that night. They had burrowed deeper into the mud than we could reach them, for nothing—I doubt if even a rat—could have escaped unseen out of the Gondeller. DONOGHUE WINS THE FIVE-MILE

The Doom of the Gondoller.

The Canadian tourist for several years has complained that the obtrusive western spirit is slowly transforming the memorial spots of the Old World.

Somebody made a plaint not long ago that he found an advertisement of "The Mastodo Minstrels" on the Castle of Chillon and struck a steam elevator in the tower of a medieval pile on the Rhine. Still more pathetic is the wail of the religious pilgrim who says that the toot of the locomotive interferes with meditation now on the Sea of Galilee and the messenger boy jostles you at the temple gate. Sherbet and sous pomegranate wine have given way in Damascus to absinthe and gin-fizz, and people who have wandered in the footsteeps of "Eothen" on the Troud complain of the western explorer's mounds of dirt.

If there is any place where the musing tourist loved to linger and breather the sunshine mixed with Tustum the fancy and delighted the ear, it was the gondolier, sacred in romance and art.

Well, the gondolier has met his of finding out what to eat and ordering.

"What do you mean?" inquired the man who sat next to him.

"I mean this: The average American citizen is woefully deficient in knowledge of what he can get to eat. He falls down when it comes to ordering a dinner. The great majority of people in this country are brought up frugally at home, and do not know anything but the commonest dishes. The consequence is that when a man goes into a restaurant for dinner or to a hotel he gazes helplessly at the bill of fare, and sees many things of which he does not know the component parts. He dare not order anything that he is not sure of for fear of ridicule, and he falls buck on roast beef and mashed potatoes. The fact is, he doesn't know anything but roast beef.

"Now, sir, my children are going to know what's what when it comes to estimate who reast beef described.

MONTREAL, Feb. 5.—Mr. O. Goyette, Mayer of St. Constant and ex-M.P.P. for Lagrairie, was held up by four footpads at the corner of St. Lambert Hill and Fortification lane on Friday night. His gold watch and chain were stolen, and as he showe i fight he was beaten almost to insensibility. He managed to reach the Riendean Hotel, where he was staying, and two dectors were summoned to attend to his injuries, the most serious of which was a dislocated shoulder.

Armies and Education.

Italy expends every year $96,000,000 for her soldiers, and less than $4,000,000 for schools. In Spain it costs $100,000,000 to maintain the army, and only $1,500,000 to educate the children; but then, it is the exception to find a Spanish farmer who is able to read or write. Germany boasts of being in the foremost rank among the nations in the Kulturkampf of the world; yet she expends $185,000,000 on her army, while $10,000,000 is deemed sufficient for the education of her children. France maintains an army at the expense of $151,000,000 and supports her schools with $21,000,000.

Baby the Animals.

A. Once bought a lot of cows of B. The Kansas Farmer heard him complain that they did not do well for him, and he gave as his reason that B. had babied them. Exactly. And he is the man that will succeed with cows. Why could not A baby them, too? A. 'told on himself' when he made that remark. We doubt not that our friend John Gould babies his cows. Terry babies his potatoes; Greiner makes his garden his pet. That is the way to succeed. But we had rather buy cows from a farm where they had not been taken care of quite so well as we propose to do it, rather than from one where they have been better cared for than we care for them. Cows take kindly to any advance in treatment, but not to poorer treatment than they have been used to. This is why some make a failure of buying fine blooded stock. The cattle are not as well cared for as they have been used to, and they cannot stand neglect or ordinary treatment so well as animals that have never known any other. Buy babied stock if you are ready to baby them a little more yet, and you will be all right.
