Senator McMullen, Formerly of The Planet, a Candidate for U. S. Congress.

The Daily Tribune, of Cheboygan, Mich., contains the following leaded announcement, headed "McMullen for Congress." Senator McMullen, of whom an excellent likeness is given in the Michigan paper, is an old employe of The Planet, and is now a member of the McMullen-Jones Printing and Stationery House, of Cheboygan , Mich. The Tribune says:—

Last evening a number of Republicans came together informally and finding the sentiment among themselves unanimously in favor of the candidacy of Senator McMullen for congressman of this district, resolved to ask their fellow Republicans of the county to join with them in forming an organization for the purpose of presenting his name to the Republican district convention and in the meantime securing for him all possible sup-The Tribune says :-

senting in a state of the mean-district convention and in the mean-time securing for him all possible support for the nomination.

The Senator needs no introduction to the people of this county nor district, where almost his entire life has been spent. He is a stalwart Republican, who has been tried in many public positions, and while he is a strong character, keen, and almost uniformly successful in accomplishing any purpose he may have in view, his methods are clean, and his public as well as are clean, and his public as well as private character, is above reproach.
