POLITICAL NOTES.

and immediately after the prorogation react upon these parties. A cry to the been committed. effect that the bill was intended to whitewash sitting members, that it was an atrocious and unprecedented piece of legislation, and a disgrace to the government, was uttered with the expectation that people generally would be misled into accepting clamor for argument. Scarcely, however, had the new act been printed and an opportunity afforded the public to acquaint themselves with its provisions, before such adverse opinions, as had been hastily formed, immediately changed and up to the present moment, not with standing repeated challenges, no organ of the opposition has ventured to sustain the defamatory references to the bill; but with significant unanimity they have run away from the discussion.

Perhaps the most pitiful exhibition on the part of any newspaper in the province, is that afforded by the Sun. It professed the utmost contempt for legislators who could support such a bill, assuring its readers that no similar disreputable legislation had ever before disgraced the statute in the eyes of the world by passing a law which would affect trials which might take place upon election petitions then because its effect was to whitewash members against whom petitions had been filed: but when the Telegraph, quoting acts of a much more objectionable character which had passed the dominion parliament at the instance of both conservative and liberal governments, and pointing out that the Ontario legislature fourteen years ago passed an act identical with the new law which is still the law of Ontario with the hearty sanction of all parties, and shewing that every law regulating or amending procedure in suits before the courts of every kind applies to pending proceedings, the Sun, when challenged to the discussion, could only reply by asking: "What is the use of discussing a whitewash bill which we find does not whitewash." This, let it be remembered. comes from the leading organ of the oppretended reason that its effect would be to whitewash members which it now admits is not the case. There is not accompanying this acknowledgement a single some slight amends even for an injustice done political opponents, would have been honorable, but the Sun in such a case has neither the courage nor the inclination to

So much has been said, more particularly reflecting upon the attorney general, in once for all to place the matter somewhat fully before the people of this county. As our readers are chiefly the attorney general's constituents, the subject will be of interest to those of them at all events The new law contains a number of provisions which were admitted even by the opposition to be an improvement on the law as it then stood, and were not opposed. Two features only were selected as likely to afford material for political capital - one was the sixth section. The principle of the sixth section is: that on the trial of an election petition it shall be lawful for opinion corrupt practices were not committed sufficient to give the member elect his majority and the defeated candidate is proved to have been also guilty of the same illegal acts. If the latter was not guilty of corrupt practices, the judge may unseat the member and give the seat to the defeated candidate or may set aside the election altogether. The effect of this a defeated candidate who may have spent ten times more money than the elected member from setting an election aside as would be more unfair than the old law. A who was defeated after spending $10,000 one voter his dinner, and thereby force B to contest the seat with him again and or a person with plenty of means an unfair advantage. The legislature of Ontario this day in force, enacting that a judge should not set aside an election when in his opinion the illegal practices were not sufficient to have secured the member's

The remaining ground upon which the opposition attacked the bill was that it applied to pending petitions. Our readers, who have seen the rabid articles published in the opposition press, will be sursyllable from the begining to the end of the enactment to that effect. The attorleft to the courts to say when the election trials came on, whether the new law was of the supreme court of this province should be of opinion that sound principles of legal construction justified the application of the new rules to the cases pending they would so apply them, otherwise, they would not. Could any legislation be less objectionable than that? We fail to see how it could be, and we affirm, without fear of successful contradiction, that ninety-nine out of every hundred laws that are passed, regulating the trial of actions of all kinds and proceedings generally, both civil and criminal, in the courts throughout the British Empire, are During the last few years his health has not left precisely in the same way. THE METHODIST CONFERENCE.

The Methodist conference, which has een in session during the past week, has brought together in this city an assembly of able and practical men, such as would Methodist church. It is a many-sided institution, with a wonderful faculty of adapting itself to the wants of a young art is long. and growing country. Within its ranks one can find almost every grade of work and workers, from the rude and simple services, the plain and homely ministrations of the new and isolated settlement, to the stately ceremonial, and polished, finished pulpit oratory of the cities; but everywhere and at all times it is the same essentials and its persistent demand for personal godliness. It is the aim of Methodism to make the basis upon which it rests as broad as the needs of the human heart. In its inception the movement. out of which the Methodist church has grown, was not an attempt to found a new sect, nor to propogate any new belief; but of a new church organization is not a subject which can be profitably discussed. The fact remains that in organized Methodism the cause of religion, moral and social reform, even civilization itself find one of their ablest exponents. Admirably adapted by its constitution to pioneer work as well to hold fast ground all ready won, the Methodist church possesses potentialities unsurpassed in their scope and variety. It is a giant force working for the right. The statement is made that Methodism can rightly claim more adherents in North America than any other
