

From the Federal Capital.

OTTAWA, June 3, 1910.

Hon. Frank Oliver, the minister of Interior, whose admitted aim is to fill up the great West with Americans, and raise all sorts and conditions of prohibitive regulations against the entry of people from the British Isles, has overstepped the mark in his new immigration bill. This legislation was forced through parliament at the last session, when everyone was anxious to get home, and some of its provisions would do credit to a Russian administration. The whole aim of the bill is to make things as uncomfortable for the immigrant as possible, and to hedge him about with a multiplicity of conditions which are almost impossible to fulfil. The maximum of inconvenience is caused the newcomer with a minimum of real advantage to Canada. While everyone admits that there should be some supervision over immigration and that Canada should not become the dumping ground for the riffraff of Europe, yet the government in its regulations which have now come into force, has deliberately followed the drastic laws of the United States, which country has to deal with conditions with which Canada will not have to meet for many years to come. This slavish copying of the United States laws has spelled trouble in the past, and in the case of Mr. Oliver's immigration bill it has already been fruitful of hardship to intelligent would-be settlers from the old land who find themselves blocked by babyish regulations framed in the Laurier nursery. It is surely time that Canada was able to stand on her own feet, and make her own laws, instead of enacting the very letter and spirit of United States legislation. But with the present aggregation of incapables in power nothing but hanging on to the rear of Uncle Sam's band wagon may be expected. When British subjects are barred from a British country, by the whim of immigration inspectors, who owe their jobs to slavish obedience to the political powers that be, then it is time to call a halt and find out exactly whether we are drifting. The Laurier government forgets that Canada is a British possession, and any attempt, as the present one, to place barriers in the way of honest men and women seeking to find in this country the opportunities denied them in the older lands, is a direct and deliberate blow to the unity of the Empire. The Laurier band plays the loyalty tune loudly, but ever and anon a jarring note of discord rings in.

If Mr. Oliver is really anxious to introduce a policy of "hand-picked" immigration, he must drop these American notions and put into force regulations which, while rigorous, are fair and just. To insult a stranger at our threshold is barbarous, and to permit officials to have such sweeping power as now exist under the new set, is little short of folly. The west is crying out loudly and constantly for bread men. Ontario is in the same boat, and throughout the length and breadth of Canada there is a need, in some districts acute, of the brawn and muscle of the old land. Then the question arises: Why spend hundreds of thousands of dollars in advertising Canada as a land of promise, as a country overflowing with milk and honey, with fields of golden grain, and trees growing under their fruitfully burdens, if the gate is locked to the would-be settler as soon as he knocks there for admittance? The whole thing is the height of absurdity, of which this government alone could be capable. Canada wants men and wants them badly, and if the farmers of Ontario and the west find they cannot get the help they need they know at whose door to lay the blame. The government in this matter has acted according to its past record. It has built up needless barriers against men and women of British stock, by reason of an extravagant fear that the scum of Europe is headed for these shores. Why pay the passage of a Dunkobor, give him fish farm lands of the west, feed, pamper and look after him, keep from starving on the prairies to a naked hunt for the Redeemer, and with the other hand slam the door tight in the face of an Englishman, Irishman or Scotchman, who perhaps has not the necessary $25 which the regulations require, but who has what is far more valuable, the willingness to work, and the determination to hew out a competence in this new land? Some day the people of Canada will awake to a realization of the fact that under the present administration the name of the Dominion is being besmirched, its resources dissipated, and all because there happens to be in office a body of thoroughly incompetent men who have no other thought than that of slavishly following the lead of the United States.

Vacation Trips.

If ever there was a favorable opportunity to visit the Western States and the Pacific Coast, it will be this summer. The attractions there are as numerous, and the railway fares as low as any reasonable person could expect. A number of patriotic, social and

An Ancient Foe

To health and happiness is Scrofula—as ugly as ever since time immemorial. It causes blemishes in the neck, disfigures the skin, inflames the mucous membrane, wastes the muscles, weakens the bones, reduces the power of resistance to disease and the capacity for recovery, and develops into consumption.

"Two of my children had scrofula sores which kept growing deeper and kept them from going to school for three months. Ointments and medicines did no good until I began giving them Hood's Sarsaparilla. This medicine caused the sores to heal, and the children have shown no signs of scrofula since." J. W. benevolent bodies will hold their annual conventions in the West this year, some of which are shown below with the dates tickets will be on sale, etc., and the Grand Trunk Railway System is granting special low excursion rates, which can be taken advantage of by the general public, as well as the members of the different organizations mentioned below. It is for this purpose we wish to draw the attention of the public generally to this matter, as we know that a number of the people who would like to arrange for a vacation trip to the Pacific Coast this summer, have an idea that these low special rates are only intended for the delegates of the fraternal bodies. Such is not the case, however, as anyone who wishes to make this trip can secure these rates on application to any of our agents, or by communicating with Mr. John Quinlan, District Passenger Agent, Montreal.

The following are some of the organizations who will hold their annual convention in the West this year.

Annual Session, American Institute of Homeopathy, Los Angeles, Cal., July 11, 16, 1910.

Ancient Order of Hibernians in America, Portland, Ore., July 19, 1910.

Triennial Session, Head Camp, Pacific Jurisdiction, Woodmen of the World, Portland, July 25, 1910.

Annual Convention, American Osteopathic Association, San Francisco, Cal., August 1, 6, 1910.

General Conference of the Methodist Church, Victoria, B. C., August 14, 1910.

American Veterinary Medical Association, San Francisco, Cal., September 5, 9, 1910.

Delta Upsilon Convention, San Francisco, Cal., September 7, 9, 1910.

Concatenated Order of Ho Hoo, San Francisco, Cal., September 9, 1910.

American Bankers Association, Los Angeles, Cal., October 3, 7, 1910.

Convention of Danish Brotherhood of America, Fresno, Cal., October 3, 1910.

National Spiritualists' Association, San Francisco, October 3, 7, 1910.

Tickets will be issued by any of the regular routes going and returning, or going by one route and returning by another—one way through California if desired. Part of the route may also be taken through the Great Lakes.

The Jeffries-Johnston Boxing Match, for the heavy weight Championship of the world, to be held in San Francisco on Monday, July 4th, will no doubt also be a drawing card for a large portion of the sporting public. A special party in connection with same is now being organized from New England States, by the Beekman Tourist Agency, 336 Washington St., Boston, Mass. For full information in regard to rates, Pullman reservations, etc., apply to Mr. Jos. M. Abern, or E. F. McLaughlin, c. o. John F. Ryan Co., No. 93 Summer St., Boston, Mass.

Agents of the Grand Trunk Railway System will be pleased to receive communications from delegates attending the different conventions, and give full information as regards rates, train service and routes, also arrange for sleeping or parlor car reservations. This will be attended to promptly, and early replies given in each case.

Keep to the Straight Line.

A teacher of wide experience, now at the head of a noted Sisterhood, once gave the following motto to her graduating class:

Keep to the straight line—cost what it may, come what will.

A member of the class said not long ago that this motto had done more for her than any minor thing that she could call to mind. It had stiffened her resolution on occasions of indecision, and the memory of it has spurred her on to the fulfilment of many an unpleasant task, which it showed to her as a duty.

And, it is, after all, no minor thing, this little motto, when we consider it in relation to what it can do for the character. It is no easy thing always to keep to the straight line. It is so much more comfortable sometimes, to gravitate in other directions, at the call of human respect, expediency or what not; and it requires considerable backbone to make no compromise with your conscience, even in little things. One is so apt to say, "Oh, a little thing like that doesn't matter," forgetting that it is the little things that count in the long run; and unless we follow the straight line in small matters we are very apt to take the wrong turn when the crisis comes.

"Keep to the straight line—cost what it may, come what will." It will cost, and it does in some ways, but even from a merely material viewpoint, it pays, and pays well. It will be a satisfaction to yourself to remember that you never made a compromise to expediency, and the very fact of "keeping to the straight line" in matters as well as ethics and morals, will make the following out of your prescribed course easier and easier as the days go on.—Columbian.

those; in that wisdom which teaches them the rule of life of the Founder of Christianity. "Whence comes then this friendship of mine to this your church, it comes because the Catholic boys and girls are taught that they are under authority. We live in a land of freedom, it is true; we live in a land where men worship God it is true, but they are forgetting that nevertheless they are living in a land of authority, and that it is the business of all to cleave fast to the ideals of democracy, law and authority in the community. And the worst thing that can happen to a people is to have them forget that God reigns; the worst thing a people can do is to have them imagine that they can find out in fifteen minutes all about the plan of life, death, and salvation; the worst thing that can come to a people is to have them believe that liberty means license, that liberty means "do as you please." "I will tell you another thing—why I'm friendly to this Church of yours. It stands today, by reason of its belief, it stands as the one bulwark against atheism and socialism in this country."

Stories of the Saviour adapted to the capacity and interest of Children seem to answer to the invitation: "Suffer the little ones to come unto me." To them, as to their elders, Jesus is the Truth and the Life; His impress on their minds is the truest, and can be made the most educative influence. We have before us four such books intended for children of various ages and approved by the proper authorities. Two are issued by Longmans, Green & Co., "A Life of Christ for Children," exquisitely told and artistically illustrated; and "Bible Stories" from the New Testament, narrated by Mrs. Hermann Bosch, with frequent but most interesting interruptions, by her little auditor, Toddlers. Those who made the acquaintance of Toddlers in the Messenger of the Sacred Heart will be glad to know more of her.

"The Divine Story," by Rev. C. J. Holland, S. T. L. (Providence: J. M. Talley), is intended for young people rather than children, and has reached the fourth edition within a year. The scope of character of "The Christ-Child," by M. C. Olivia Kelley (Washington, D. C., Darby Printing Co.) are admirably described in the preface by his Eminence Cardinal Gibbons. "It is intended for the youngest children of learning the simplest lessons of our Lord's life. It aims to show them the preparation for His coming and the most important facts concerning His person and His work. I am sure that His loving and reverential spirit, its simple, easy style and its winning love, which shows that the writer understands and sympathizes with the child's mind will make a deep and favorable impression on its young readers." It is 62 pages of a handsomely illustrated quarto Miss Kelly weaves the story of Christ from creation to the Ascension with a skill and touching simplicity that should reach the minds and hearts of all who have arrived at the age of reason, or beyond it.—America.

An Unbiased Tribute to The Church.

Two or three paragraphs of a speech delivered by Governor Marshall on occasion of the delegation of St. Joseph's College Chapel at Rensselaer, Indiana, May 21, deserve to be treasured in the memory of Catholics. It is not often that the "Prudent" policy of statesmen permits plain, straightforward speech, and the courage that throws such prejudice to the winds is worthy of our esteem. "I like many things about the Catholic Church and I'm not coward enough to conceal them in the State of Indiana. I believe no man is educated for the high and responsible duties of American citizenship unless trained to understand that God reigns and Jesus is the ruler over man kind. If I had any fault to find, it is not my business to find fault with the people who have been kind to me; if I had any fault to find with secular education it is that there are too many men losing their moorings; that they are turned out upon the sea of life without realization of the eternal. And why should I not be proud to be present upon an occasion such as this, at an institution such as this, where these young men are trained in liberal education, an education which teaches them their duties to the family, an education which teaches them their duties to their State; an education which teaches them their duties to the God of their fathers. "This constitution of ours guarantees to every man in the State of Indiana the right to worship God according to the dictates of his own conscience; but some men think that this gives them a licence to worship or not to worship God, as they choose. I object to that. I submit that, although the constitution allows every one to worship God according to his conscience, I believe that every man must worship God somewhere, some how, some place. And so I welcome this institution, building young men up in the most Holy Faith of the Mother Church; building them up in knowledge and wisdom better than

Make the Best of All Things

It is safe to say that no one is perfectly satisfied with his surroundings. There is no station in life which can furnish us with complete contentment. The man does not live who can truthfully say that he would not in some respects change his environment if he could, under the conviction that if we were changed, he would be better in development, a stronger and a happier soul. This is a fact which has impressed every generation since the first created being opened his eyes on this beautiful world, or listened to the music of the wind as it used the branches of the trees as its harp-strings. Moreover, the fact will remain one of the chief characteristics of human nature until the last generation enters the shadow that keeps the other world from view. It would be curious to know what kind of a creature he would be who had just what he wanted. Would he be happy, or would he be miserable? The condition of affairs would be so different from anything we have experienced that it is impossible to say what the result would be. The only inference we can draw from it all, that so far as in us lies, we must influence our environment instead of allowing it to influence us. Many a man has been crushed because his home was not at all as it should have been, and many a woman broken-hearted because of a want of harmony in the household. It is possible to endure all the ills of life in such a spirit that we shall not be harmed by them, that we shall even grow better and purer through their adverse influence? If this is God's world and not the Evil one's we ought to be able to hold our own against all odds for otherwise our life is simply a cruelty and our chief sorrow is that we are born in it. Frequently no change can be made in our environment itself but it is certainly possible so to alter one's attitude towards it that one will learn to make the best of it, and that is a very important secret. If you worry over the inevitable, and the unavoidable, you simply waste your time and energy, and break your heart. The question is not how to get rid of the disagreeable, but how to become independent of it, and if you cannot use it for better things, you can live your own life in spite of it. The more you kick against the goad, the more you hurt yourself. Sometimes you can climb over a wall, if you cannot knock it down. If you can neither climb over it nor knock it down, you can remain where you are and make it a pleasant spot. If you would be reasonably content, you will never allow the grinding ills of life to disturb you any more than can be helped. If you can get any comfort from things outside you, enjoy it and be thankful. But true contentment must come from within; from the consciousness of duty performed in the sight of God. As perfect happiness is gained only when the soul looks face to face upon the Beatific Vision in Heaven, so the nearest approach to that happiness is obtained on earth when the soul feels that it stands right in the eyes of God. This is indeed effected and helped on through grace and religious devotion, but a great help will always be the effort to turn all things in life to the performance of duty, in other words, to make the best of everything.

The New Bridge at Hell Gate.

Announcement has been made that work will begin soon on the gigantic Hell Gate Bridge, which is to connect the New York, New Haven and Hartford Railroad system with the Pennsylvania, thus giving New England access to the West through the Pennsylvania tunnels under the East River, Manhattan Island and the Hudson. The bridge is to cross the East River from Port Morris, in the borough of the Bronx, by Ward's Island and Randall's Island to the Long Island yards of the Pennsylvania, in the borough of Queens. It will be known as the New York Connecting Railroad, and will cost $30,000,000 for the twelve miles of its length.—America.
