The only other boxes unaccounted for are those from Medicine Lodge and Maseled River polls, awaiting these boxes not to be in by Saturday adjournment will likely be made until Monday, October 30th, two weeks from the original declaration day, the limit of adjournment allowed under the Dominion Elections Act.

ATTEMPTED ROBBERY WAS OF MOST DARING CHARACTER

DETAILS OF OPERATIONS OF SAFE CRACKERS AT ASH BROTHERS' JEWELRY STORE INDICATES PRESENCE OF EXPERTS—USED CAYENNE PEPPER TO COVER UP TRACKS.

One of the cleverest attempts at robbery in the history of Edmonton police records, was perpetrated on Sunday night, when several expert cracksmen made a daring but unsuccessful attempt to get away with the contents of the safe in Ash Brothers' jewelry store, 111 Jasper avenue west.

A short account of the affair appeared in yesterday's Bulletin, but details are just coming to light which prove it to have been one of the boldest attempts ever made in this city, and the work of men who have had long experience at the game. It was only by a strange freak of fortune that the jewelry firm is not minus stocks to the value of thousands of dollars. The city detectives have been placed on the case, but there is little to go by, and the chance of bringing the criminals to justice is slight.

To visit the scene.

A Bulletin reporter visited the store last night and was shown over the premises. As the safe is situated, the marauders had the best of chances to get into the store, as they had worked their way through the chain of seemingly impenetrable barriers.

To get at the safe, the thieves—for the evidence are that there were more than one—had first to pry open the back window which faces the lane at the rear of the store. Having once gained access to the store, they went about their work in a very business-like manner. To prevent surprise in the rear, they clamped the window down with their hands, so that if policeman in his rounds should chance to try the window, he would find everything apparently safe and sound.

At Work in Rear of Store.

Having gained entrance, they were now in the rear of the store, and used as a work-room by the employees, and were still barred from the safe by a thick door. Yesterday a large hole in the panel near the lock showed how the bolt had been shot and the door opened. This hole was evidently bored with a brace and bit. With this obstruction removed they were now able to commence operations on the safe. The safe is a small one, and entirely enclosed. The safe is built in the wall in such a manner that the back of it protrudes into the room.

The next move was to tear away all the cabinets and shelves which had been built up around the safe and carry them into the work-room. There is also a hole in the wall of the room into the front shop, and extra precautions were taken to prevent surprise from the front by opening a small hole through this door, to serve as a peek-hole. This served the double end of guarding against anyone unexpectedly entering the store and also to watch the city policemen as they passed on their beat.

Safe a Strong One.

Everything was now ready for the safe-cracking, and the tools peculiar to the craft were produced. The burglars were evidently well supplied with tools, fully adequate for the job which they had undertaken. The safe is a strong one, and constructed along the lines of most safes, which are fireproof and burglar-proof. They are not constructed of solid steel, as most people erroneously believe, but of a combination of steel and iron. The steel, possibly an eighth of an inch thick, or less, and in-between is a fire-proof layer of fire clay several inches thick.

To penetrate the wall would to the ordinary layman be an impossible task almost, but to cracksmen, as the perpetrators evidently were, the work was apparently simplicity itself. However, it must have taken a long time, so long, in fact, that the burglars appear to have miscalculated the time and were surprised just as they were preparing to leave. At any rate, their exit was so hasty that they left without taking the "swag" which was all neatly bundled up in a green bag, which the proprietor found lying on the floor when he entered the room.

Back of Safe Cut Open.

A cursory examination of the back of the safe would lead one to believe that the steel had been cut with something in the nature of a cast-iron, only much more powerful. The finding of a piece of steel pipe on the floor also bears out this theory. After the outer thickness of steel had been cut through, the solid layer of fire clay was seemingly chiseled out bit by bit until the inner thickness of steel was cut in the same manner as the outer. From this point it was an easy matter to reach the army through and take out the jewellery.

The safe was piled high with trays of watches, bracelets, diamond pendants, etc. These had been taken out one by one and placed in the bag. On top of these were several velvet cases of diamond pendants and lockets, at-

IS INVESTIGATING THE COMPENSATION ACT

Ontario Justice Holds Inquiry to Get Views as to Legislation—Employees and Employers Speak—Objection Taken by Some to Having Employees Insured.

Toronto, Oct. 25—The parliamentary buildings were crowded today when Chief Justice Meredith opened the enquiry which precedes the creation of a "Workmen's compensation for injuries act," which will be satisfactory to find the proprietor half-way down the store. Then there was a rush for the back door, which had been unlocked and left unattended in case of such an unwelcome surprise. In their haste they forgot everything about the bag of cayenne pepper, which they left scattered about the floor.

A Clever Piece of Work.

"It is certainly one of the cleverest pieces of work I have ever seen," said Chief Lancey, "and leaves no room for doubt as to the skill of the marauders. As to who they were, we are as yet in the dark."

The attempt was made sometime between 10:30 Sunday night and eight o'clock Monday morning, and presumably the greater portion of the work was done in the latter part of the night. One of the proprietors left the store at 10:30 Sunday night and everything was left in the rear of the store.

The strong construction of the safe is probably what saved Ash Brothers their valuable stock of gold and diamond jewelry, for had it been of a flimsy character it would have been rifled in a comparatively short time. As it happened, the task of getting at the contents proved so difficult that before the attempt could succeed the operators were forced to leave the premises.

Used Cayenne Pepper.

What makes the story read all the more like a page out of a dime novel is the fact that cayenne pepper was sprinkled in large quantities in the tracks from the rear of the store down the lane to Second street. It would seem that the professionals were laboring under the impression that the city police force was equipped with "bloodhounds," with which they could be tracked down. The pepper would effectually prevent any chance of this.

The tools were wrapped in a Minneapolis paper, dated September 15, which makes it possible that the owners hailed from the "American city."

The only loss sustained by Ash Brothers will be the damage done to the safe, the destruction of the doors by the holes bored through them, and the tearing of the cabinets and shelves. This in itself is insignificant compared with the value of the jewelry in the bag, which would have been lost had the attempt been successful.

MURDER IN SUDBURY.

Sudbury, Oct. 24—Peter Horachuk, a Pole, about 18 years old, lies at Victoria Mines with his head on the left side blown in and Nick Smyth is in Sudbury jail charged with murder.

Saturday, Theo. Dorchner and Geo. Seymour were walking along the road between Mond village and Victoria Mines, when they heard a shot about 150 yards away in the scrub bush. They ran over on the ground. Bathed in blood, lay Horachuk. The men ran to Mond village for help and returned with a number of miners. Horachuk was not to be seen but a trail of blood showed where the body had been dragged to a hole some thirty feet away. In it, and partially covered with dead leaves, they found the lad quite dead. Smyth was captured and confessed to the murder, but would give no reasons why.

The child was unconscious when rescued, but recovered. Albert Campbell, the father of the baby, wished to reward the rescuer, but Barber even refused to accept the cost of his ruined clothes.

Yes, Sir! Clarke's gloves are by far the best on the market to-day.

Couldn't they very well be otherwise. Rest quality skins, tanned in our own tannery and made up in our own factory. Not a step in the making that is not watched over by our eagle-eyed inspectors. Perfectly finished to the smallest stitch.

Take our "Horsehide" Gloves, for example. Real horsehide, remember—not cowhide. Feel the soft, pliable skins. Note how neat and comfortable on the hands.

Beats all low long they'll wear—think they were from. Guarantee them to be heat and wet proof. Stand scalding and scorching without getting hard.

Look for Clarke's stamp on the gloves you buy, and make sure of best value for your money.
