Changes of Moon Affect Ailments.

The word "lunatic" was first ascribed to epileptics, who seem to be greatly affected by lunar influences. And it has been noticed that many nervous maladies-such as vertigo, hysteria and sleep-walking-are more acute during the periods of the new and full moon.

It is at the period of the month's change that these symptoms chiefly occur. For instance, in several cases from St. Pierre yesterday and will it has been proved that children subject to convulsions usually suffer most at the time of full moon, wherein ballast to Job Brothers & Co., after as paralytics are subject to recurring that in the case of epileptics who are subject to lunar influence, it is always on the third day after the full moon that the fit ends in intermittent

The moon's influence on vegetable life has long been recognized. Some market gardeners insist that there is right time in the moon's phases to plant certain crops to secure the best results, while many old-time farmers would not make a fence or cover a consider the proper time of moon. With regard to this latter point actual tests have shown that wooden wi llplease note that it will start tiles placed on a roof in the light of the moon will curl up and not last half as long as those put on when he sky is dark. A further remarkable fact about the moon's light is its effect on a broody hen. It requires an average of 21 days for eggs to hatch. Occasionaly it has been noticed that a hen will bring out chicks a day or two earlier, and this is said to be due to the influence of the moon. The proper time to set a hen is when the moon is new, or very close to that period, so that the moon will be full just about a week before the time for hatching ar-It is claimed that more eggs will hatch is set at this time, and that the young chicks will be stronger and nore vigorous and will grow more rapidly. On the other hand, chicks natched when there is no moon are often more weakly and do not make such strong and vigorous fowls, nor re they such good egglavers. Wine also is said to be subject to that it is not wise to make wine when

Nicholas Elected Successor to Czar

The Supreme Council of Russian Monarchists, representing all that is left of the movement in favor of the return to the Czardom in Russia, has just completed a five-day secret session in Paris, during which Grand Duke Nicholas, former Commander-in-Chief of the Russian army, was elected successor to the Throne of the late Czar Nicholas. It was also decided immediately to remove the headquarters of the Russian Monarchists' organization from Berlin to Paris. Sixty prominent Russians, including Grand Dukes Cyril, Nicholas, Dimitri and Alexander, attended the meeting, coming from all parts of Europe for the purpose. The council was held sooner than expected because of the recent announcement by Grand Duke Cyril that he was the logical heir to the Romanoff Throne. Cyril and Dimitri were considered for the honor by the Council, but Nicholas received 55 of the 60 votes. Alexander Trepoff, who was once Premier under the old regime, was elected President of the
