YOUR GIRL

Will take a real interest and make a success of the fine art of cooking if you provide her with the necessary equipment at home. Just because her grandmother used an old-fashioned coal stove is no reason why the young generation should be burdened down with it. If your kitchen is equipped with a "SMOOTHTOP" VULCAN GAS RANGE, fitted with a Modern Heat Regulator, perfect results are certain.

Try this recipe for NUT BREAD: 4 cups flour, 6 teaspoons baking powder, 1 teaspoon salt, 1 cup sugar, 1 cup English walnuts, 1 cup milk, 2 eggs. Mix and sift dry ingredients and add the chopped nuts. Add milk and well beaten eggs. Put in two buttered pans and let stand 20 minutes. Set your oven heat regulator at 375 degrees and bake for 20 minutes.

SIDE TALKS.

HOW DO WE EVER DO IT?

How in the world do we ever do it?

Don't you wonder yourself sometimes when you are driving through a bit of particularly wild traffic, how it is that you can sit there so calmly in all the confusion and do the necessary thing at the necessary time—you who when you were learning to drive that car trembled if you saw another car coming and felt almost paralyzed when two were heading for you at once from different directions.

What The Motorist Must See.

And now we come into a busy square with streets going out in four directions, and without any great sense of effort we manage to see everything that is going on that concerns us. A woman is just going to dodge out from behind a parked car. Must look out for her. Another parked car is about to back out, but there will be time to pass before it gets started, as the driver has only just put his foot on the starter. The conductor of that trolley car is winding up his car, is he going to start or not? He is, must get off the track. Does that boy on the bicycle see us coming? He does, there is no need to blow, and blowing would only confuse him. Is there going to be a traffic cop at the crossing? Yes, there he is? Now we shall have to watch both him and the eight pedestrians and the lady with the baby carriage who are very likely not to pay any attention to his signal and to rush into the middle of the street just as he motions us on. That is a little more difficult than if he weren't there at all and we only had the pedestrians to watch, but we have done it before and we can do it again. . . So we swing safely past and even have enough eye left to notice what a cunning pink and gold and white baby it is in the baby carriage. The open road is before us again. . . . . .

How do we ever do it?

A Few Close Shaves Needed.

It certainly is a study in the ability to develop a capacity, to think how one changes in a few months from the driver who sits tensely forward in his seat, clutches the wheel violently with both hands and is filled with nervous irritation if anyone speaks to him when he is passing another car, to this person of power and poise.

In fact it often takes too short a time to make the change, for it is the driver who has gotten over his first fears and who is intoxicated with his own new cleverness and his new power, who is the most dangerous of all drivers, I think. I am much less afraid of the brand new driver than of him.

After he has had a few close shaves, though he will still have the competency I have described he will also (unless he is an incurable fool) have more common sense and caution.

The Safest Driver.

A friend of mine refused an invitation to go on an auto trip with a mutual friend because he had been involved in on accident recently and she was afraid of his driving. I have been out with him several times since the accident and I know that he is intensely safer than before,—when she went with him without question.

Give me for a driver a man who has been driving long enough to have the motions automatic and to have the eyes so trained that he can watch a traffic cop and a dozen pedestrians and a trolley car and half a dozen autos all at once, and also long enough to have had some common sense knocked into him.

Unknown Hero Drowned.

Returned Soldier, Without Friends Or Funds, Gives His Life.

OWEN SOUND, Ont., June 10.—An unknown returned soldier, apparently without friends, and without funds, gave his life in a vain attempt to save Colin Moore, ten years of age, about four o'clock this afternoon. Both man and boy were drowned. They were fishing at Harrison's Dam, in this town, when the lad fell into the deep water. The man at once threw off his coat and plunged in. Both became entangled in the fishing lines and were soon exhausted. The bodies were recovered.

No one has identified the man. He had a meal ticket in his pocket bearing the name of I. G. Smith, but he was not known in the restaurant. Five cents was all the money he had on his person.

Girl's Long Ride

BELLEVILLE, Ont., June 16—(Canadian Press)—Miss Owen Lazier, who recently reached the City of Washington, D.C., after riding 600 miles on horseback from the City of Belleville, had some wonderful experiences on the trip. She passed through 75 urban municipalities, including the large cities of Philadelphia and New York, travelling over crowded State highways and through congested city streets in safety. Once her horse "Tip," while "feeling his oats" too much as a result of the generous care he received, threw his rider, but she was not hurt. On another occasion he ran away with her for several miles but the road was good and he gradually tired out. The hundreds of people she met officially and personally all treated her with extreme kindness and courtesy.

Miss Lazier delivered invitations from Mayor W. C. Mikel of the City of Belleville, to the President of the United States, the British Ambassador at Washington, the Chief Justice of the Supreme Court of the United States and the President of the Commissioners of the District of Columbia, to attend the celebration of the 140th anniversary of the settlement of Upper Canada, to be held at Belleville June 16th, 17th, 18th and 19th.

Miss Lazier was photographed many times along her route and during her trip received several proposals of marriage and offers to go into the movies.

The unique character of the trip helped to focus attention to the good relations that exist between the people of the United States and Canada, two countries that commenced their respective careers as a result of war but whose people are now living side by side in peace and concord without a fort, gun or soldier on the frontier.

What is the Use of Living

What is the use of living when a woman gets up in the morning as tired as when she went to bed at night with headache, backache, dragging-down pains, nervous, irritable and despondent? These are all symptoms of ailments peculiar to her sex which makes life a burden. Every woman in this condition should rely upon Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, a good old-fashioned remedy made from roots and herbs. It contains no narcotics or harmful drugs, and for fifty years has been restoring women to health and strength, and the joys of living.

Ramsay MacDonald's Candor

It is not likely that Ramsay MacDonald's term as Prime Minister of Great Britain will be a very lengthy one, but he has one quality which on a recent occasion seems to have temporarily saved the life of his Government—it is the saving grace of candor. Fighting with his back against the wall on a want of confidence motion censuring his Government for having failed to keep pre-election promises to solve the unemployment problem he disarmed his critics by saying:

"In regard to our pledges and their fulfillment, why should I not confess we were a little innocent in this matter? Things which seemed very simple to carry out when we were without experience became very complicated and difficult when we became members of a Cabinet responsible for them."

So naked a confession, must have seemed indecent to the hard-bitten politicians of the House of Commons and subversive of time-honored traditions; but out of the mouths of babes and sucklings we shall learn the truth. It took the veterans of the Liberal party so much by surprise that it apparently changed the resolve of some of them to vote the Government out of power. Perhaps the morning after they commenced to realize that the child-like ingenuousness of Ramsay MacDonald's confession was rather curious coming from an old stager like the Prime Minister. Both he and his right-hand man Philip Snowden have long been members of the House of Commons immersed in public affairs, and in a technical sense brilliant parliamentarians. Long before they were in the House they were political journalists. Many of Stanley Baldwin's followers are juniors compared to them.

The confession of "innocence" and "inexperience" by MacDonald, Snowden and other prominent members of the Ministry who have been before the public for three decades is less candid than it seems at first blush. If they did not know that Cabinet responsibilities are complicated and difficult and that the nature of pledges should be considered in all their phases before they are made, who should know? Let it be granted that politicians never do learn this lesson; but when we recall how the orators of the Independent Labor Party have scarified other political leaders for their failures to carry out rash promises to the electorate; this confession by the Prime Minister that he and his associates are human just like other politicians seems to have been received with extraordinary tolerance. It is the old story; the fault admitted, is already half forgiven.—Saturday Night.
