Japanese Commander Points Out the Hopelessness of Rescue and Promises Safety.

Che Foo, Nov. 8. - 5:30 p.m. - The the watching Russians.

A Russian prisoner captured Oct. 28 said the soldiers composing the garrison of Port Arthur, in want and dispirited, saw the hopelessness of the struggle. Despairing of relief, with food scarce and medicine and hospital supplies insufficient, it was admitted by the Russians that a Japanese victory was ultimately inevitable. The soldiers, according to the prisoner, see no reason to prolong the resistance which brings glory to their officers, but chiefly hardship and death to them. Upon hearing the prisoner's story, General Nogi drafted a letter to be circulated among the soldiers themselves, the prisoner having promised to deliver it in mercy to his comrades. The letter to make the theorem on the stage and regarded Gen. Kuropatkin's retreats and related Gen. Kuropatkin's retreats and his inability to make an impression on the army of Field Marshal Oyama, to the army of Field Marshal Oyama, to the field form of the field of the field form of the field form of the field form of the field of the field form of the field letter also pointed out that the second started on its slow voyage. Continuing it called attention to the resistless advance of the Japanese trenches, making it a matter of wheeks when the Japanese would walk into the main Russian strongholds.

In conclusion, the letter offered humane treatment to all who surrender, saying it was in the interests of humanity to prevent further useless slaughter.

Several copies of the letter, written in Russian, were given to the prisoner, who regained the Russian lines unobserved by his officers. That night the Russian returned, saying his comrade would answer within a few days. He said the temper of the men seemed to show that, while they were mutinous towards fate, they also did not like the idea of an unofficial surrender. The leter did much, hoever, to dispel among the Russian troops the impression fosletterdid much however to dispel among would follow a Japanese victory.
