FAIR DISTRIBUTION OF COAL WILL MEAN NONE NEED SUFFER

Coal Dealer Hopeful for Comfort of All People.

RAIL MOVEMENT IS SLOW

Dealers Fill Orders Cautiously and Only One Appears To Be Up to His Demands.

"Why did I ever grumble over the heat of last summer?" is the wail of many a shivering householder, who is pondering the question, "To light or not to light a fire." If the householder is one of those lucky mortals, who has coal in the bin, then it is a matter to decide whether it is better to retail the properties of the second of the n one's death of cold in a chilly, o house now, or run the risk of hing later on. The coal oil stove certain extent, has stepped into breach and never, even in the zero ather of a year ago, has there been ch a vogue for the coal oil, gas or electric heater, such a run on the sup-plies of dealers in these.

Says None Should Suffer.

So far as the coal situation is concerned the warning sounded is that it behoves people (who have coal) to husband their resources, both for their own good and the public welfare. Said one coal dealer today: "With a fair distribution, no one should suffer." The distribution, no one should suffer." The inference is that it's up to the fuel controller to exercise authority, and see that no plutocrat is allowed to have his cellar bursting with coal, while others are robbed by his selfishness of their just allottment.

In some respects the situation has been a little better this list few days.

Some of the dealers have coal in, but at that, they are only looking after their customers. Alas and alack, for the new person in town, or the one who hasn't been able to afford the luxury of a regular dealer! One merchant has received as much as three carloads.

Take Orders on Invoices.

A man lacking coal and hearing the big news hied him to the dealer only to be told, "We will need six carloads more before we can fill the orders we have on our books. Hereafter, we only propose to accept orders when we receive invoices. If we receive an invoice for 200 tons we will accept only orders for 200 tons."

While a large number of people than ever before in London have in their workers of cold.

supply of coal, taking the precaution to secure it in April and May, there are numbers of others who have bought and paid for their ceal as far back as June, and are still warming themselves on hopes. They welcome the news that a carload or so is foming in daily or almost daily on each of the railroad lines into the city. If they wait long enough it will come round to their

That coal is roming in so slowly at this time of the year is attributed by some who are in a position to know to the fact that so much is going up the later that so much is going at the lakes. On explanation given is that things and t a great deal better on the other sile of the line, and the statement added that such big wages are paid to workers in the mines that can afford to work only part time. And Should Citizens Forget That Sir Arthur Currie Is a Native of Middlesex? What Is YOUR Idea of An Appropriate Name?

"I quite agree with The Advertiser, that the name lacks character and would be more fitting for a nice farm dairy or a summer cottage," said S. Frank Glass, M. P., in regard to the naming of the new military hospital, which the city council decided will be known as "London View Military Hospital."

NAME LACKS CHARACTER. Mr. Glass added that he thought the name lacked character or individuality, as it did not stand for anything, and while he liked the idea of adapting the name of a battle or a notable figure in the war. he believed that considering the situation of the hospital it might well be named Westminster Military Hospital. This would indicate the location, give the place an historical association and would be euphonious.

"I don't much care what they call the hospital so long as it is suitable, but in the name of heaven, I must protest against the colorless title the city council has chosen," added Mr. Glass. "Citizens should support The Advertiser in its effort to have the name of the hospital chosen,'
