A General Meeting of the Trustees of Queen's College, specially called in accordance with the Royal Charter, was held this day.

A letter from Mr. H. J. Borthwick, formerly Head Master of Queen's College School, having been laid before the meeting, it was resolved that Mr. Borthwick should be informed, that, as his case had been decided at an adjourned General Meeting of the Trustees, at which a letter was read from him declining to recognise their jurisdiction, this Board cannot now enter upon it.

There not being a sufficient number of Trustees present to proceed to the election of a Professor to fill the vacant chair, the meeting was adjourned to the evening at 8 o'clock.
