BOXERS FROM THE STATES HERE

Two New England Champions and Runner Up Arrive for Maritime Meet—More Entries.

William Conway, secretary of St. Mary's Club, Halifax, arrived in the city this morning accompanied by Edward Healey and C. McInnis. The former is the clever 135 boxing champion and the latter is a fast and clever 118 pound boxer. Roy Chisholm, one of the best 125 pound men in the provinces, was expected to come here to participate, but was unable to do so. S. Naylor and J. O'Grady are expected here tonight accompanied by J. Sullivan, who was formerly manager of Roddie McDonald. Naylor is going to box under the colors of the Y. M. C. A. in the 135 pound class and O'Grady will enter the 145 pound class as a representative of St. Joseph's A. C.

Three crack amateur boxers from Boston arrived in the city today and will give exhibitions in the maritime championships tomorrow and Thursday evenings. They are Ernest Sawyer, New England champion for 1921-22 in the 125 out class; Harry Toppy, runner-up in the 135 pound class; and Eddie Sorley, champion of the 145 pound class. The three boxers, who are coming here arranged by James Power of St. John and Steve Mahoney of the Boston Advertiser.

Later word is that the committee in charge of the big meet arranged to have Roy Chisholm of Halifax reconsider his intention of not participating in the bout, and he is expected to reach the city tomorrow morning. It is also announced that ten entries in addition to those announced yesterday have been received.

The car, a small one of popular make, but rebuilt for racing purposes, was designed and entered in the race by Louis Chevrolet, Artie Chevrolet of this city. ### IN WALL STREET.

New York, April 11.—(10:30).—Vanadium was the only prominent exception to the further advance of prices in the opening of today's stock market. Other stocks, as well as equipments, coppers, motors and oils, notably the foreign group, were higher. Among the less conspicuous issues Iron Products at a gain of 2-8/4 points, and Electric Storage Battery's rise of 3-4 points were the chief features. New high records for the year included several of the minor rails but that group seemed to be hesitant as a result of overnight developments in the coal strike situation. McKay Company and Market Street Railway preferred issues represented the higher utilities.

Noon Report.

New York, April 11 (noon).—Studebaker, Central Leather, American Can and Stromberg, at gains of 1 to 4 points, were added to the many new high records for the year during the morning. Their strength followed an early reaction in which such stocks as Mexican and Pan-American Petroleum, Famous Players common and preferred, Westinghouse, Corn Products, Sears Roebuck and Davidson Chemical were carried down 1 to 2 points. The more obscure steels, notably Nova Scotia, Otis Common and the vestments, Mackay Company, Columbia Gas and People's Gas. Call money opened at 4 1/2 per cent.

POWER COMPANY WEEPS OVER THE WIDOW AND ORPHAN

divided on $3,100,000. There were hundreds like himself. This bill could hardly be surpassed by Bolshevism. James MacMurray said he represented the Eastern Securities Company and objected to the bill. Much stock had been sold on the understanding that the rate base was $3,100,000. Many of the investors had been widows. The present bill meant confiscation and the loss of practically every dollar put in the company. Its enactment would destroy confidence in the legislation passed by the House. To Commissioner Frink, Mr. MacMurray said he was opposed to the bill. He was giving a satisfactory service and if the city wanted its property it could buy it at a fair value. H. F. Robinson said he appeared as director of the New Brunswick Telephone Company in opposition to the bill. The principle of regulation of public utilities, he said, was generally recognized but such regulation should carry with it protection for those utilities. So he was suffering from hydrophobia. It had gone a little bit crazy. He knew men would like like troopers when they got talking about the New Brunswick Power Company. Hon. Mr. Foster—"What caused this?" Mr. Robinson said the company had been caught by the terrifically increased prices exacted by the war and had been compelled to come to the legislature and secure new rates. Since that time the attacks on the company have never ceased. The principle of regulation of public utilities, he said, was generally recognized but such regulation should carry with it protection for those utilities. So he was suffering from hydrophobia. It had gone a little bit crazy. He knew men would like like troopers when they got talking about the New Brunswick Power Company. Hon. Mr. Foster—"What caused this?"

PERSONALS

Mr. and Mrs. T. M. Taylor, of Hillsboro, N. B., wish to announce the engagement of their daughter, Violet Marie, to John Jones, of Texas, the marriage to be celebrated at Hillsboro, N. B., on May 10, 1922. Mr. Taylor said he was attending a session of the National League in New York. There was quite a display of overconfidence at the New Orleans camp of the Yankees, but a series of humiliating defeats by the St. Louis and Brooklyn teams had brought them back to earth. The local National League team, third last year, evidently aim to outstrip Pittsburgh and New York by powerful hitting. Nearly all the team's regulars hit well above 300 last year, including Roger Hornsby, 1921 champion batter. The infield is unchanged. The pitching staff is doubtful and its ability to win games depends on the showing of the veterans Bill Donk and Jeff Pfeffer. Admittedly weak behind the bat, the team's greatest strength is in the box. Brooklyn will transport nine moundmen all season, including the veterans Griggs, Beathley, Cadore, Mameau, Mitchell and Smith, and three promising youngsters, Gordonier, Vance and Shriver. The outfield is the same as last season and but one change may be made in the infield. St. Louis is sending two well-balanced clubs into the pennant races of the two leagues this season, and it is believed they will be pennant contenders. ### SUES BILLIE BURKE AGAIN.

Mrs. Brown Now Seeks $25,000 Damages From Actress.

Chicago, April 11.—The difference between Billie Burke and Mrs. Brown, Towney Brown, which became acute recently when the actress obtained an injunction to retain a house in the North Shore residential section she had rented from Mrs. Brown, took on more territory when two suits were filed.

Mrs. Brown, organizer of a widows' protective league and prominent actress, charged that Miss Burke telephoned her husband in New York every night at $15 a call, the charges going on Mrs. Brown's bill, and again sought to dispossess her, but was blocked by the injunction. She also objected to Miss Burke's dogs and to statements attributed to the actress that "the home was filthy."

ELECTION CARD

To The Electors of the City of St. John Ladies and Gentlemen:—

I wish to express my sincere appreciation for the support which was accorded me in the primary election on Monday last and I respectfully solicit the same generous measure of support in the final ballot, scheduled to take place on April 24. The result of the ballot was very gratifying to me, and as it would be impossible to express my thanks to every elector who cast his or her ballot in my favor, I take this means of conveying to them my sincere appreciation.

Very truly yours,

B. W. WIGMORE.

STRIKING ADDRESS BY JUDGE MELLISH

"Amusement" His Subject, But Treated in a Novel Way—Pleasure in Work.

Mr. Justice Mellish addressed the Progressive Club of Halifax, on Tuesday on the subject of "Amusement," and in the course of his remarks covered a wide range.

"The subject of Amusement, for the purpose of my remarks," said the judge in opening his address, "may be confined to the legitimate feeling of pleasure which people all more or less experience. Sometimes it is sought after, and when it is not sought after, it comes upon a great variety of circumstances, such as age, temperament, health, prosperity and social environment, yet no one in any circumstances except the most exceptional is incapable of enjoyment in some degree. On the other hand, none of our pleasures can perhaps be said to be unadulterated. Pleasure is largely a matter of will and temperament. If we are pleased the world seems good—if not it seems bad, even though we may not for the time contemplate leaving it."

The judge then recited a bit of verse which expressed this idea, namely:

As some would like to make it,
This world is not so bad a world,
But whether good or whether bad
Depends on how you take it."

"Not Yet."

The desirability of living in the world, no matter how bad it is, was best illustrated, the judge declared, by a favorite story of the late Justice Longley's, about the Sunday school teacher who after vividly describing the glories and beauties of heaven, asked how many girls and boys wanted to go there. All raised their hands but one boy; and when the teacher said, "Why Johnny don't you want to go to heaven?" he replied "Not yet."

The judge then touched upon two of the greatest factors in modern life, motor cars and moving pictures, pointing out that both could produce evil if abused, yet both had great possibilities. Moving pictures had been used with splendid effect in prisons to break the monotony of a confined life.

While he believed that the importance of relaxation should not be overlooked, yet there was, he pointed out, a great deal of pleasure, of a higher kind to be found in doing one's life work well. This pleasure men were prone to overlook in their search for amusement. He had met one of the happiest looking individuals he had ever seen, in the North End recently, and discovered that the cause of his great self-satisfaction was that he had just put in seven tons of coal himself and felt that he had performed a mighty labor. He was filled with pleasure at the knowledge of work done well.

The work done by a housewife was an example to which the judge attached much importance. A housewife does a prodigious amount of work during a day, and attended to a thousand and one cares, and took pleasure in her work if her results were satisfactory. Men too often failed to realize the amount of work done by the housewife and did not take a lesson from her pleasure in doing it well. He quoted as an example of the pleasure taken in their work, the discovery of the principle of specific gravity by Archimedes and of the principle of the planetary system by Kepler. Both had been overcome with joy at the result of their labors.

For the Joy of It.

He believed, he said, that the day would come when the inventive brains of men would produce a civilization in which all men would be engaged in work which their nature and ability best suited them, thus making for greater efficiency in results and giving an opportunity for satisfaction and pleasure in the work of each.

Three or four years before the great war, the judge went on to say, an eminent authority on the subject of things for which men should strive, Mr. Williams had ventured a prediction in an article on civilization in the Encyclopedia Britannica. Speaking of the great gap existing between the narrow spirit of nationalism and that of world citizenship, this writer had said that "the gap to be covered is a vasty wide one, no one need be reminded who recalls that the civilized nations of Europe, together with America and Japan, are at present accustomed to spend $200,000,000 each year, merely that they may keep armaments ready to fly at each other's throats, should occasion arise. Formidable as these armaments now seem, however, the developments of the not very distant future will probably make them quite obsolete, and sooner or later the time must come when common intelligence will rebel at the suicidal folly of the attitude that characterized, for example, the opening of the twentieth century. At some time it will come to be recognized that there is a world fraught with fuller meaning than the word patriotism. That word is humanitarianism."

Not Charity, But Big Vision.

This sympathetic spirit of humanitarianism was not, he declared, the mere so-called charity which gives something for nothing, but a vision which is its own reward. The very best things for good would come not from the pulpits, but from the council chambers of the assembled nations and the rostrum of politicians for the sake of trade prosperity, if nothing else. The judge then told the story of a P. E. I. farmer who kept his boys working very late in the afternoon and when they slackened, he declared that the best way to live and enjoy living was to "do a good day's work and smile when evening comes, even if it doesn't come in the middle of the afternoon."
