A CIDER DRUNKARD.

The Westfield, Mass., Parricide and Self Murderer Kept Drunk on Cider for Months.

SPRINGFIELD, Mass. April 20.—Edward King, the parricide and self murderer, at West Farms, near Westfield, had been living at his father's house since last fall, doing little else but drink hard cider all the day, for lack of a more fiery but not more debasing stimulant. There were half a dozen barrels of cider in the cellar in November, but before March every one was empty through Edward's constant drinking. Then by some means he got money enough to replenish the supply by buying a barrel at occasional intervals. The more cider he drank the more and more morose and stubborn and vindictive he seemed to get, as is usual with cider-soaked drunkards.

U. S. TREASURY.

First Comptroller Durham Resigns.

BY TELEGRAPH TO THE GAZETTE.

WASHINGTON, April 22.—First Comptroller Durham severed his connection with the Treasury Department to-day. There are several explanations for this action, the one generally accepted by those supposed to be acquainted with the inside facts is that the first comptroller has taken a position on several official matters entirely at variance with the views of the present administration. The immediate cause of change is due to a personal misunderstanding between Attorney General Miller and First Comptroller Durham.

Will Try to Break a Trust.

CHICAGO, April 20.—Geo M. Kidd, the New York wholesale liquor dealer, whose fortune is estimated at from $6,000,000 to $10,000,000, has, it is said, gone in to break the Western whiskey trust. Kidd formerly owned a distillery in Des Moines, Ia., and forced the trust to buy him out.

Treading on a Serpent.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE GAZETTE.

Sir: The character befouling quill-driver of Progress (so called) or mis-called having passed safely through the feat of vilifying the members of the Portland City Council, without having received his much deserved cow-hiding, evidently feels that he is safe in striking for higher game. "There is no lie half so black, as a lie that is but half a lie," "nor no attack that is half as mean, as the contemptible inuendo. The "virulent quill-driver" aforesaid has adopted this as his plan of campaign in his attack on the Rev. G. M. C. Botterell. We read in the Bible that when the people of God long ago went up to worship, the devil went up also; he is evidently not done doing that sort of thing yet; in his attack on Mr. Botterell this foul-minded scribbler felt a degree of security not enjoyed when dodging round corners to escape the intepid Alonzo or John with his shot gun. His probable knowledge that the Baptists of Saint John are a peace loving and peace promoting people is his guarantee that he is safe from a well deserved coat of tar and feathers. His impecuniosity is his best safe guard against legal actions and his serpent like nature gives him the right to crawl unmolested into his native fastness, though causing a shudder to come over the timid observer however honorable he or she may be. As long as such reptiles are permitted to produce their vicious poison, no one is safe. Saint John for years has suffered from spasmodic visitations from just such execrable rags as this miscalled Progress, but thanks to the good taste and better judgment of the people of our city they all died young "unhonored and unsung." It will soon be said of Progress as of an ancient city Trojafuit. Our Baptist friends will not likely be among the chief mourners.

It is said by travellers that in South America a branch of the monkey family is death on snakes, their manner of killing being to wring the necks of their hated victims. Would it not be well to import a few monkeys?

Some railroad man has given to the world what he knows on this subject in the following:

FIRST EDITION.

OKLAHOMA.

TEN THOUSAND WILL GET LAND AND MANY WILL BE DISAPPOINTED.

The Disappointed will Return Home, Locate Graveyards, or Become Squatters Elsewhere.

BY TELEGRAPH TO THE GAZETTE.

CHICAGO, April 22.—The scramble for the virgin soil in Oklahoma begins at noon today.

This morning, according to the latest despatches, fully 50,000 people are waiting on the border of that small patch of ground. Fast horses, railroad trains, stages, and all sorts of private vehicles will bear them into the coveted territory at the earliest possible moment. Ten thousand or more will get possession of all the desirable land, and then they apparently will have to hold it against five times as many disappointed men. Everybody is armed. No government save that of the war department exists. There is reason to fear, therefore, that much bloodshed will result from the general turmoil.

Many of the men who cross the border of Oklahoma today will be residents tonight of large towns which have no extance this morning. The towns and farming lands will furnish a large part of people with a local habitation.

The rest will go back to their old homes or will help to locate graveyards in the new country, or become squatters in the Indian territory or settlers in Texas or Arkansas.

The scenes in Oklahoma to-day are without parallel. The sudden turning of an nninhabited country into a country teeming with people is an unique incident in the country's history.

GROWING BIGGER.

The Great Standard Oil Monopoly Planning for Still Larger Profits.

FINDLAY, O., April 22. Regarding the buying up of the Ohio petroleum field by the Standard Oil Co., one of the representatives of that company said yesterday:

"In addition to constructing the pipe line from Cygnet to Cleveland, to connect the Ohio and Pennsylvania field, it is also the intention to construct a pipe line to St Louis to supply the southwestern states, and at that point a refinery will also be established, from which Kansas City will be supplied with the refined article and made a distributing point. A larger refinery will be built in Chicago for the accommodation of the great northwest, with depots at Omaha and Duluth.

"On all these pipe lines will be relay stations from which dealers and consumers of crude petroleum will [illegible] as well as refiners and shippers, will save all profits which have heretofore gone to middleman.

"We shall be in position shortly, not only to control the production of crude but will hereafter control the price of refined oil."

FAT AND LEAN MEN.

Some Opinions as to Their Dispositions After Marriage.

It may be observed, without intentional offence to any young lady who may be enamored of some skeleton-like young man, that, as a rule, fat men, besides being the most jolly and convival of the male species, are also apt to be the most considerate of and charitable to others. Most fat men are ever ready to smile, nay to laugh heartily. They usually possess happy natures—perhaps because as a class they have good appetites and enjoy what they eat. They are more sociable than their lean brethern a fact which explains why no one ever heard of a Lean Men's Clam Bake. After all is said that can be said against them, the fact still remains that seven out of ten fat men make excellent husbands.

Most unmarried ladies cherish as their ideals men who are tall, and cannot boast of any unusual amount of adipose tissue. They spurn the idea of a fat man for a life-long companion, and yet many marriages with fat men, and also with men who grow rapidly or gradually stout after marriage, have turned out very well.

A lady who has her home on Fifth avenue, a widow, whose two husbands repose side by side in Greenwood, remarked the other day to the writer: "My first husband was of the brunette order, tall, angular, sallow-faced, saturnine, nervous— even to irritabile at times, and more or less of an invalid during the latter part of his life. No couple could have furnished a wider contrast in temperament than ourselves. I am social by nature, fond of attending theatres and of sight-seeing, while he was a morbid recluse, taking no interest whatever in the world's gayeties. I really believe if he had had a little more flesh on his bones he would have been a different man. Mind you I am casting no stones at his cherished memory. My second husband belonged to another genus. He was six feet two inches tall and weighed 250 pounds. He was a pronounced blonde, and a perfect picture of health. He took an interest in everything, though not to the detriment of his business. I never had to ask him twice to go anywhere with me. He was always eager to participate in anything where mirth and a good time were promised. But the poor man drank too much champagne and ate too many late suppers, and apoplexy carried him off.

A lady in Brooklyn, on being asked what physical style of man she preferred, replied: "The one I have suits me very well. He is neither fat nor lean. According to my ideas of masculine physique, he is just right."

Another lady who was present volunteered the information that her husband was too fat for his own comfort, and that when he moved he suggested to her the picture of a big piece of animated jelly. Going up one flight of stairs made him puff like a fire engine, and he was always complaining of some pain. She feared that he had fatty degeneration of the heart. It seemed to her that his moral sense had grown blunter as he acquired flesh, and in conclusion she said that she did not have much admiration for flabby fat men.

A popular clergyman, who weighs 250, on being asked his views respecting fat men thus replied, with a merry twinkle in his eye:

"There are different kinds of fat men. There is the little, round, oily, fat man. [illegible] him as a fat man. Then there is the man who gets abnormally fat because he is lazy and indolent. To me such a man is an object for compassion. But for the man who is born and stays fat, or who gets fat naturally as he matures, I have the highest respect, providing the man in other ways is worthy."

A lank, cadaverous visaged poet, who is often seen walking along Newspaper row, was recently asked if he would not enjoy life more keenly if he were a trifle more corpulent. "No," he swiftly and disdainfully answered, "corpulency befits Aldermen, boodlers and saloon keepers. Though a literary man, I never indulge in malt, which—to paraphrase from Emerson—is making our Western wits fat and mean.' You will find that the majority of intellectual people are not gross, though many of them are what might be termed plump. Point me out ten fat men and I will point you out nine stupid men. Was Apollo coarse and unctuous? Was the Greek conception of a perfectly moulded body that of one weighing 300 pounds? No. Art and poetry ever have sought to immortalize such lithe and willowy forms as that of Venus, such trim, athletic limbs as those of Diana, such graceful symmetry as that of Hebe. Really, I would rather be a snail than a fat man."

"Assuming," observed the poet's questioner, "that as a rule those not fat are the most intellectual and eminent in the world, how do you account for the fact that of all the people who obtain divorces only about one-fourth are fat people?"

"Oh returned the poet, " you might as well ask why there are not as many fat people in the world as lean. I am not married, but if I ever do take a wife, you may rest assured that she will not be a woman of such dimensions as to attract offers from dime museum managers."

Then the long-haired votary of the muse pursued his fanciful way toward a 15-cent restaurant.

Prohibitory Hypocrites.

LEAVENWORTH, Kan., April 16. A prominent citizen of this prohibition town, entered the private office of the chief of police last night without knocking, and was astonished to see the police commissioner, Dr. R. Anthony, who was the Republican candidate for governor last autumn and the Republican and prohibition candidate for Mayor this spring, drawing beer from a keg and passing it to Chief of Police Doane and several other Prohibition leaders. None of them stopped drinking when the prominent citizen entered. One, however, said they were drinking it to keep it from spoiling.

Twelve hundred immigrants from the British Islands arrived at Halifax yesterday. It is evident that the influx of immigrants into Canada this year is likely to be large. There is likewise a very extensive movement of population from the older provinces of the Dominion especially Ontario, to the North West. There is little doubt that Montreal and the Northwest of Canada are likely to find 1889 the best year in their history.

Professor Weldon's bill for the extradition of criminals from the United States, is to be placed in government orders, and may become law this session. It is likely, however, to provoke a good deal of discussion, as a measure constitutionally objectionable, and for which there is no real demand.

The Post office at Pembrooke Ont., has been robbed of everything in the shape of money, stamps and registered letters.

A NEW SALT TRUST.

PRESIDENT BURT WANTS $10,000,000 TO CONTROL THE SALT PRODUCT OF THE UNITED STATES.

Details of the Plan—Salt will not go up in Price, but $500,000 will Annually be Saved in Expenses of Operating.

BY TELEGRAPH TO THE GAZETTE.

TOLEDO, April 22.—The Blade will say this evening, on the most unimpeachable authority, that President Burt, of the Michigan Salt Association, sails on Wednesday next for Southampton, to secure $10,000,000 by means of which, with the pool already formed in this country, the entire salt product of the United States will be controlled by a syndicate of which he will be the head.

The English capitalists who have operated the salt trust in Great Britain, are interested in this project, the details of which have all been arrainged.

Each district will produce its usual quantity of salt and will report to the head quarters; will make the sales and see that the stuff is shipped in the most economical manner.

It is estimated that in this way there will be saved in the operating expenses of e business at least $500,000 a year even at the present low prices of salt. It is not the purpose of the proposed syndicate to go into this matter with the intention of forcing the price of salt up. There will be no necessity for any such action, and with the business management consolidated and concentrated the saving in the operating expenses will yeild a comfortable return.

When it gets there it will trend across Behring Sea, and down into Asia. All this I believe, will be done in twenty-five years, and there will be literally an iron girdle around the earth. It is no harder to build a road down the Himalayas than to build across the Sierra Nevadas or other places where roads have been built. Snow sheds, can, and will be built, the same as we have over the Sierra Nevadas for forty miles. Behring Sea is the worst obstacle, but a way would be found to conquer even that. The reason why the road through [illegible] the obstacles to be overcome. [illegible] no doubt that in twenty-five years a man can go clear round the earth by rail.
