

CLYDE FITCH DEAD GREATER THAN CLYDE FITCH LIVING

Master of Stagecraft in The City Makes Women Shriek and Strong Men Tremble.

Posthumous Play on Life in New York a Monster of Deceit and Death—Its Story.

Special to The Standard.
New York, Dec. 30.—Clyde Fitch is dead, but his hand has come back as from the grave to pluck the heart-strings of New York with its posthumous play, "The City."
So full of horror is one space of 15 minutes in the second act that human nerves almost break; strong men go into a lobby after the act, to smoke and try vainly with weak, artificial smiles to break the spell by talking silly conversation.
The play is a discussion of whether the city or a country town is best for men and their families. The answer is cynical. It is "the city."
Geo. Rand, banker, lives with his family at Middleburg, N. Y., but his grown children plead to move to New York.
Banker Rand has not been clean in this country town, for he is the father of Geo. Frederick Hannock, son of the village milliner. Hannock, though he does not know Rand is his father, discovers the banker is giving money to his mother, and being a half-crazed drug fiend, enters Rand's office to blackmail him.
When Hannock departs Rand tells his son the truth about Hannock. Then the old banker falls dead.

In the second act the family has moved to the city and Geo. Rand, the son, in a self-holy way, has worked off himself into prominence, through crooked methods of business.
During the act the audience sees Hannock, who is now Rand's secretary, take his drug. Then come five thrills.
Thrill No. 1. "You can't fire me," says Hannock to Rand. "Your sister is in love with me."
Thrill No. 2. "I love him and we were married an hour ago," the girl tells Rand. The horror of the situation that seizes Rand also seizes the audience. Rand rushes to Hannock.
Thrill No. 3. "You must not marry her. My father was your father and she is your own sister."

Hannock is half-crazed. His oaths are real and terrible, as he calls Rand a liar. Rand, hoping his sister will believe him, calls her.
Thrill No. 5. "This man is your brother," shouts Rand to her. Hannock draws his revolver to shoot Rand, but misses and kills the sister. Rand takes the gun from him.
Thrill No. 6. Shrieking, chattering like a gorilla, Hannock pleads for his life. "I'll die anyhow," he says. "If I go to the chair, I'll tell the whole terrible secret of how you came to fame and of your father's life."
Tully Marshall, who plays Hannock, does a piece of work that has gained him fame. His portrayal of the nerve-shattered drug fiend makes men shudder and makes women shriek; many of them desert the boxes during the climax of the act.

TO BERMUDA AND BACK FOR A SONG

Dr. Mattison, from Any Old Place, Has Nice Voyage Over Christmas

New York, Dec. 30.—It was a lucky inspiration that prompted Dr. J. B. Mattison, once of Brooklyn, recently of Mount Vernon, and now of "any old place," as he phrases it, to select the steamship Orotava, of the Royal Mail Steam Packet Company, on which to make his fifteenth voyage to Bermuda.
For, when he walked off the vessel on her return here yesterday, he had not paid a cent for his Christmas week's sojourn aboard, and the kind-hearted officers evinced no disposition to have him explain his strange venture.
Dr. Mattison is sixty-four years old and has not practised for years. Once he was at the head of the Brooklyn Home for Narcotic Inebriates. Not an alcoholic, you see, by any means, telling of the institution. His long bushy hair is nearly white; so is his heavy mustache. He is proud of both hair and mustache, for he fancies they make him look like Mark Twain.
On her second trip to Bermuda, the Orotava had pulled out into the Hudson from pier No. 50, last Wednesday, when Captain W. J. Barrett was attracted by a commotion on the wharf. Then the tug Barrett put out and made for the Orotava, and for the steamship's ladder from the tug's deck scrambled Dr. J. B. Mattison.
"Nearly missed her, didn't I?" he said to the purser, Mr. H. V. Sturges, and Dr. J. C. Cornack, the surgeon, "but I'm glad I didn't. I wouldn't have missed the trip for anything. But I must get my baggage."

WIFE WILL NOT HELP HUSBAND

Mrs. Bryce at Odds Politically With Ambassador's Brother—She's for Votes for Women and He Isn't.

New York, Dec. 30.—Mrs. Annan Bryce, who is the sister-in-law of Ambassador Bryce and in whose honor Mrs. Martin Littlejohn gave a luncheon yesterday, has decided that she will not return to Scotland to help her husband win the Inverness seat at the January election.
"My position is a somewhat embarrassing one," she said yesterday afternoon. "I have been a strong Liberal ever since I was 18 years old, and I have always taken a prominent part in Mr. Bryce's campaigns. Of course I want him to get in this year, but I cannot work for him as he has been my custom. I feel that to do so would be inconsistent with the loyalty which I feel toward the cause of woman suffrage."
"But doesn't Mr. Bryce believe in it?" she was asked.
Mrs. Bryce smiled a trifle nervously and smoothed down the folds of her Alice blue crepe dress.
"He not only doesn't believe in it," she responded sadly, "but I am afraid that there is very little prospect of his being converted. As for me, it is one of the cardinal principles of my political faith. I have not said very much about it since I arrived in America because I have been visiting my brother-in-law, the Ambassador, in Washington and he is very much opposed to giving the ballot to women. He didn't wish me to talk at all to representatives of Washington papers because there is always danger that anything said by a member of his family might be construed as an official utterance. An Ambassador must be perfectly neutral on all questions of politics."

EDWARD MEDAL TO HAVE WIDER SCOPE

Royal Decoration To Be Awarded for Heroism Displayed in Industrial Employment—A Recent Case.

London, December 28.—King Edward has decided to extend the scope of the Edward Medal established in 1907 for rewarding acts of gallantry in saving life in mines and quarries to similar acts in the course of industrial employment.
Before 1907 conspicuous gallantry in civil life could only be recognized by the high but rare distinction of the Albert medal. There were no means of rewarding acts of great courage on land by decorations appropriate to particular vocations.
The Albert and Edward medals in conjunction with the Board of Trade medal for saving life at sea and the King's police medal for merit of courage on the part of members of the police force and fire brigades were granted for conduct and service throughout the empire and cover the whole range of dangerous employments in civil life.
The Albert medal remains the reward for acts of the highest devotion and courage in civil life, and this week it was given to a little Welsh boy, Tom Lewis, who showed heroism on the occasion of the disaster at Newport docks in July last. A trench had collapsed and a number of men were pinned down by the beams. To rescue one of the men the aid of a small boy who could slip through the narrow gap between the beam was required. Tom Lewis volunteered and for two and a half hours he worked with chisel and hammer down in the darkness

CAN THE LORDS BRING THE U. S. TO GOD

Henry George Jr. Writing If Standard from London Tells of the Humbug Election Promises of Peers.

(Note—Henry George, Jr., the political economist, is in England observing the momentous campaign in progress there. George has written two articles for this newspaper on the election situation as he sees it. On Monday The Standard will print his second article in which he shows the similarity of events as they are happening today in Britain.)

By Henry George, Jr.

Special to The Standard.
London, Dec. 30.—Can the British workingman be gulled?
That is the underlying question in the great electoral struggle now going on in the United Kingdom. He has been fooled so many times that the princes of privilege think they can fool him again. At any rate they are trying to do it, and are promising him all manner of things.
Chief among the promises is that if he will vote for their parliamentary candidates and give them a majority in the House of Commons they will raise his wages.
It is the old bait of despotism. If the worker will produce something and hand it over to the idler, the idler will give a part of it back to the worker. Simple and palpable as it is, it has caught the worker ten thousand times. Will it catch him this time and first time?
What these benevolent lords in this instance say is that take raw cotton, reforming by reforming the laws. Reforming what laws? Why, the laws relating to commerce; or rather the customs in that country that put few things in that country that but which, they say, ought to be made to bear upon many things, so as to discourage or stop importations from outside the kingdom and make an increased demand for the production of those things inside the kingdom. That will mean more employment for British workers, they argue; and more employment will mean more wages.

Chapman and Alexander Organize Mammoth Business System to Evangelize America.

Special to The Standard.

Philadelphia, Dec. 30.—Rev. Dr. J. Wilbur Chapman and Chas. Alexander have returned from an evangelist tour of the world that extended over a period of 10 months, during which they travelled 36,000 miles and held 1000 meetings.
The Moody and Sankey of the present day have aroused a religious fervor never before equalled in Philadelphia. Thousands of every denomination and every class accorded the returning evangelists a welcome as few religious leaders have had.

CHAS. ALEXANDER, DR. J. WILBUR CHAPMAN.

It was Dr. Chapman who started "Billy" Sunday, one of the most successful and probably the most picturesque revivalists in America.
Chas. Alexander, the Sankey of this evangelistic partnership, has made three tours of the world, singing in nearly every large city on the globe. It was he who made the "Glorious Song" famous throughout the world during his revival tour with the Rev. R. A. Torrey. He conducted the largest evangelistic choir ever organized, 4000 members, for two months in Royal Albert Hall, London.
Dr. Chapman and his associate have reduced revivals to a perfect system. A complete organization plans the whole campaign in its every detail. A more businesslike system does not exist in any mercantile establishment.
A series of mammoth revivals to be held throughout the United States is being mapped out, a campaign for evangelizing this country by states rather than by cities.
January will be devoted to the state of Maine, where the work will be centered in Portland. In February, Ohio will be the battleground and great revival meetings are planned for Columbus and Dayton, the storm centres of that state.
Dr. Chapman says that "the world is on the eve of the greatest religious revival since the days of the apostles, a revival which will shake the world, and when it starts the entire globe will become evangelized."

OUT OF THE WISDOM OF A SIMPLETON

The Unique Bequests of an Insane Man—Would Devise Means of Happiness to All—Lovers Imaginary World.

Below is given the will of an insane man which attracted much attention when first published a good many years ago. The text is from a correct report of the original possessed by the law department of the University of Michigan. It is as follows:
I, Chas. Lounsbury, being of sound mind and disposing memory, do hereby make and publish this, my last will and testament, in order justly as may be, to distribute my interest in the world of my interest which is known in law and recognized in the sheep-bound volumes as my property and make no disposal of it in this, my will.
My right to live, being but a life estate, is not at my disposal, but these things excepted memory, do hereby now proceed to devise and bequeath.
Item—I give to good fathers and mothers, in trust for their children, all good little words of praise and encouragement, and all quaint poet names and endearments, and I charge said parents to use them justly and generally, as the needs of their children may require.
Item—I leave to children inclusive, but only for the term of their childhood, all and every, the flowers of the field, the blossoms of the woods, with the right to play among them freely, according to the customs of the country, warning them at the same time against thistles and thorns. And I devise to children the banks of the brooks, and the golden sands beneath the waters thereof, and the odors of the willows that dip therein, and the white clouds which float high over the giant trees. And I leave the children the long, long days to be merry in, in a thousand ways; and the night and the moon and the stars, and the milky way to wonder at, but subject nevertheless, to the rights hereinafter given to lovers.
Item—I devise to boys, jointly, all the useful idle fields and commons where ball may be played; all pleasant waters where one may swim; all snowclad hills where one may coast, and all fields and ponds where one may fish, or where, when grim Winter comes, one may skate; to have and to hold the same for the period of their boyhood. And all meadows and the clover blossoms and butterflies thereof; the woods and their appurtenances; the squirrels and birds and echoes and strange noises, and all distant places which may be visited, together with the adventures there found. And I give to said boys each his own place at the fireside at night, with all pictures that may be seen in the burning wood, to enjoy without let or hindrance, and without any incumbrance of care.

Item.—To lovers, I devise their imaginary world, with whatever they may need; as the stars of the sky, the red rose by the wall, the bloom of the hawthorne, the sweet strains of music, and aught else they may desire to figure to themselves, the lastingness and beauty of their love.
Item.—To young men, jointly, I devise and bequeath all boisterous, inspiring sports of rivalry, and I give to them the disdain of weakness and undoubted confidence in their own strength. Though they are rude, I give to them the power to make lasting friendships, and of possessing companions, and to them exclusively I give all merry songs and brave choruses, to sing with lusty voices.
Item.—And to those who are no longer children or youths or lovers, I leave memory, and bequeath to them the volumes of the poems of Burns and Shakespeare and of other poets, if there be others, to the end that they may live over the old days again freely and fully, without tithes or diminution.
Item.—To our loved ones with snowy crowns, I bequeath the happiness of old age, the love and gratitude of their children until they fall asleep.

Japan Depressed.
Tokio, Dec. 30.—The economic situation in Japan at present is not encouraging and its looked for revival has not arrived. As a result depression in manufacturing is great and the great agricultural section throughout the island is gloomy. This is primarily due to the low price of rice following a bounteous harvest.
