In Lawrence, Susie M. Smith, a young lady about seventeen years of age, daughter of Dr. Greenleaf Smith, after a short third Order of St. Francis of Assissi, illness, died on Wednesday, September 9, at 6 o'clock in the evening, and from that time until Friday, at 12 o'clock, the 9, at 6 o'clock in the evening, and from that time until Friday, at 12 o'clock, the body was apparently possessed in part by other spirits.

On Wednesday, the day of her death, she said: "Father, I have attended my own funeral." She described it as very real, declared herself perfectly conscious of what she was saying, and also spoke of singing and gave the names of hymns she had beard.

she had heard.

She continued rational during the day, when finally, about six o'clock, she passed into violent spasms; a gradual paleness overspread her face from the forehead; she became speechless, closed her eyes, and to the senses of those about her bedside life was extinct. Indeed, there seemed to be no question about it. Our readers are aware how a loving heart reversely leaves the leaves that the cannot readers are aware how a loving heart reversely electric shocks. She has ex-
