

Conclusion. In concluding this report I beg to say that the information it contains has been procured from the most reliable sources and that it has been my object, while sketching the history, the present condition and the future requirements of the Postal Service, to put you in possession of such facts as I trust will convey some idea of the rapid progress which has been made and which is being made in this portion of the Dominion.

Hoping for your approval.

I have the honor to be, Sir,
Your obedient servant,

J. DEWE,
Chief P. O. Inspector.

The Honorable
The Postmaster General,
Ottawa, Ontario.
