When in Bed

Put some Vapo-Cresolene in the vaporizer, light the lamp and place it near the head of the bed. Then all the time the baby sleeps it will breathe-in the healing, soothing vapor. The hard, tight cough loosens; the fever gradually goes down, the breathing becomes natural, and pneumonia is avoided. Every part of the throat and bronchial tubes are touched by the medicine. For the hard colds and coughs of children nothing equals Vapo-Cresolene.

Vapo-Cresolene is sold by druggists everywhere. A Vapo-Cresolene outfit, including the Vaporizer and Lamp, which should have a lifetime, and a bottle of Cresolene, complete, $1.50; extra supplies of Cresolene 25 cents and 50 cents. Illustrated booklet containing physicians' testimonials free upon request. Vapo-Cresolene Co., 100 Fulton St., New York, U.S.A.

GENERAL FRENCH.

The South African Cavalry Leader Was Early Destined for the Navy and Served a Year as a Cadet.

Major-General John P. D. French, who won notable successes in South Africa, was early destined for the navy. In 1868 he joined H. M. S. Britannia and served as a naval cadet for one year. Eight years later he joined the army and was gazetted to the 8th Hussars, from which he was shortly transferred to the 19th Hussars. With this regiment he did nearly all his early military service, and the only active service which he saw before being called upon to command a cavalry division in South Africa. But the two years' fighting which he saw in the Soudan, 1884 to 1885, gave him an insight into the working, and especially the staff-working, of cavalry in the field, which has proved of the greatest value to him in later years. During the years of peace and cavalry inactivity which succeeded the Soudan campaigns Sir John French passed quietly up the slow ladder of regimental promotion. He served much of his time with his regiment in India. A succession of staff appointments at the War Office placed the command of the Aldershot Cavalry Brigade within his reach. He was appointed to the 1st Cavalry Brigade in 1899, and in the autumn of that year his chance came. Within 24 hours of landing in Natal he was in command of a force in touch with the enemy, and on October 21, he commanded at Elandslaagte. But though, says the London Times, General French possessed the true qualities of a great cavalry leader, the eye for a country, the mind that will make a decision in two seconds, and once made will not falter to right or left, yet he did not drop into South Africa a ready-made soldier. He had much to learn. His first lesson was to adapt cavalry trained entirely for shock tactics to undertake dismounted duties—in a word to make a cavalry regiment at a pinch cover the ground that would be assigned to three battalions. He received his first rude lesson at Lombard's Kop, on October 30. But he was a man who could profit by experience. Almost by a miracle he was allowed to escape from the investment of Ladysmith, to be sent to Colenso, where, through three trying months, he learned the great lessons in modern cavalry tactics, and adapted them with such ability that when the crucial moment came he was a master of the capabilities of mounted troops in the face of modern rifle-fire. The successful relief of Kimberley was the first result, the heading off of Cronje at Paardeberg the next, and he went steadily on—onward. Although there has been no third or fourth theatrical coup to bring the name of the one General who will take a risk in war, whenever the consequences balance, into further prominence, yet there have been successful movements in South Africa on a large scale to the success of which Sir J. French has not materially contributed. And even at the eleventh hour he was selected by Lord Kitchener for the most important and delicate task of reducing the Cape Colony rebellion.

General French's reputation, continues The Times, has not only been made during the war, but it has also been maintained, and the man who in two short months of campaigning could throw aside all the cramped and impractical theories of a life of training and adapt his command to the entirely new conditions of a new country and new power in fire-arms, as he did at Colenso, is a man of sufficient calibre to be entrusted with the training in peace of our most important army corps. That he has proved himself capable of commanding it in war no one will deny.

The Hope Diamond.
The famous Hope diamond, which has just changed owners, was originally one of the French Crown Jewels. During the stormy days of the French Revolution the regalia were put under the charge of the Garde Meuble, whence one night the whole was stolen. The thieves were never discovered, but an anonymous letter informed the commune that one, or two articles would be found in a certain ditch. This proved true, and among the objects recovered was the famous Pitt or recent diamond. This stone was found in India in 1701 by a slave, who, to conceal it, made a wound in his leg and wrapped the diamond in the bandages.

An English captain, who thereupon threw the slave overboard and sold the stone to a native merchant for £1,000. It afterwards passed into the hands of Pitt, Governor of Fort St. George, who sold it in 1717 to the Duke of Orleans, then regent of France, for £135,000. The Hope diamond is a portion of a remarkable stone brought from France by Tavernier and sold to Louis XVI.

The thieves who obtained the stone in 1792 apparently broke it into three pieces, of which the Hope diamond was far the largest, but all reappeared again after a sufficient interval of obscurity.

Tribute to Dickens.
Lovers of Dickens will welcome the proposal before the London County Council to call the new open space in Southwark "Little Dorrit's playground."

The spot is quite close to the old Marshalsea prison, which figures so conspicuously in "Little Dorrit." Near it also is St. George's Church, where little Dorrit used to sleep on the cushions, and where she and Clemens were afterwards married. Indeed, this particular corner of Southwark is alive with memories of Dickens.

Over the way is Lamb Street, where Bob Sawyer lived; close by is Quill Street, which recalls the "Old Curiosity Shop," while in the Borough High street adjoining used to stand the White Hart that gave Sam Weller to the world.

Treachery of Tropical Nature.

"It is very like a fairy story," said Esther under her breath. "And in fairy stories there are witches, enchanters and horrible things that come out of the forest, are not there? Well, so it is there in South America. There is a background of danger. One must keep one's eyes open. Here in England nature is safe and kind, eh? You can play with her as she were an old tabby cat, but out there she is a striped tiger, beautiful and fierce and never to be trusted."

"There is everlasting strangling going on in the woods. Even the flowers are not kind and harmless. The orchids twist and perch and swing and bloom on branches they are hugging to death. You break a twig of something that looks like a vine, and its milk raises a blister on your hand; you touch what you think is a leaf, and it gallops off on a hundred legs! The animals pretend to be vegetables and the vegetables to be animals. Every living thing is trying to protect itself with all its little might and main and to get the better of its enemies, just as the people in towns do. Oh, the high woods of the Andes are not moral, they are not Christian. I assure you! Nature is impudent and she is splendid, but she isn't good."—"The Alien," by F. F. Montresor.

Crushed the Objection.

Booker T. Washington told an amusing story of an old colored preacher who was endeavoring to explain to his congregation how it was that the children of Israel passed over the Red Sea safely, while the Egyptians, who came after them, were drowned. The old man said:

"My brethren, it was this way: When the Israelites passed over, it was early in the morning, while it was cold, and the ice was strong enough so that they went over all right; but when the Egyptians came along it was in the middle of the day, and the sun had thawed the ice so that it gave way under them, and they were drowned."

At this a young man in the congregation, who had been away to school and had come home, rose and said: "I don't see how that explanation can be right, parson. The geography that I've been studying tells us that ice never forms under the equator, and the Red Sea is nearly under the equator."

"There, now," said the old preacher, "That's all right. I've been 'spectin' some of you smart Alecks would be askin' jest some good question. The time I was talkin' about was before they had any joggies or 'quators either."

Some English Ads.

A general servant advertised in a Bristol paper for a place the other day, but required "no inquiries, no caps or aprons, every evening out, good wages," and a "journalist" advertised himself as a "no particular ability" as himself. A clerk recently sought a place "where great strength, personal appearance or ability are not required." "Good butter, sixpence a pound. Nobody can touch it" was ambiguous and may have been wrongly interpreted by the public, and a Gloucestershire paper advertised, "Our one and nine pen advertisement, promptly attended to, apologized next day for mixing up two separate and distinct announcements."

But it is a fact that a church paper appealed lately for "Old man, lame, deaf, epileptic. Will any Christian take him for a gardener?" An advertiser asked for "250 pay debts incurred through losses at betting."—London Standard.

Unexpected Erudition.

"An absent-minded professor of languages dropped into a restaurant one day for a luncheon."

"What will you have, sir?" asked the waiter.

"Fried eggs," replied the professor.

"Over?" said the waiter, meaning, of course, to ask whether he wanted them cooked on both sides or only one.

"Ova?" echoed the professor, surprised at his apparent familiarity with Latin. "Certainly. That is what I ordered—Ova gallina."

This the waiter interpreted as meaning "extra well done," and that is the way they came to the table—YOUTH'S Companion.

A Story of Bunson.

Sir Henry Roscoe in a privately printed book of lectures tells a story of Bunson, remembered from the time when he and the German scientist were traveling together in England. They met a lady who mistook Bunson for his cousin, the Chevalier Bunson.

"Have you finished your book, 'God in History' yet?" she asked him.

"No, madame," he replied. "I regret that my untimely death has prevented my doing so."

Discretion the Better Part.

Miss Gushington—But were you now frightened, captain, when you saw the enemy advancing?

Captain Kandor—No; I felt safe so long as I had a couple of life preservers with me.

Miss Gushington—Life preservers? Captain Kandor—Yes, my legs.

Figure It Out.

Since the force exerted by the human heart every twenty-four hours is sufficient to lift 120 tons one foot high, when a man tells his sweetheart that "he loves her with all his heart," can it be that he means 10,000 pounds an hour?—New York Times.

A Suggestion.

The Angry Father—What do you expect me to do—send you all the money you ask for or calmly allow you to get into debt?

The Son—You might do both.—Life.

DON'T GIVE IN.

If you have tried various so-called remedies and obtained no relief, don't say that there is no cure for rheumatism. The trouble is, you have not taken the right medicine. What Dr. Hall's Rheumatic Cure has accomplished for thousands of sufferers it can do for you. Mr. S. O. Taylor, Charlotte, Ont., suffered with rheumatism in the back (lumbar) for four years; five bottles of Dr. Hall's Rheumatic Cure completely cured him. He has been free from pain ever since. As a blood purifier it has no equal. This preparation is put up in bottles containing ten days' treatment. Price 50 cents at all druggists or The Dr. Hall Medicine Co., Kingston, Ont.

The more a man studies himself the less fault he will find in his neighbor.

Pain in the Back.

Makes life miserable. Can it be cured? Yes, in one night. Polson's Nervine gives a complete knockout to pain in the back, for it penetrates through the tissues, takes out the muscles and pain, invigorates tired muscles, and makes you feel like a new man. Nervine cures quickly because it is stronger, more penetrating and more highly pain-subduing than any other remedy. Don't suffer another minute. Get Nervine quick, and rub it in, for sure as you were born it will cure you. 25c.

The first and worst of all frauds is to cheat one's self.

Don't think less of your system than you do of your house. Give it a thorough cleaning; too. Take Hood's Sarsaparilla.
