The Storage of Ice For Summer Use

The storage of a few blocks of ice for summer use is a very simple matter where the ice is readily available. Any unoccupied corner of a shed will serve for the purpose of a rough ice house to provide 50 lbs. per day for 130 days, after allowing for a reasonable amount of wastage. The smaller the quantity stored, the larger is the proportion of waste.

The bottom of the enclosure should be covered with about 1 foot of sawdust. If the soil underneath is impervious clay it will be all the better if there is a few inches of gravel under the sawdust. In putting in the ice the boards can be taken away from one side and replaced after the ice is in position. A space of 1 foot should be left between the ice and the boards to be filled with sawdust, and the ice should be covered with about the same thickness. It is the sawdust which keeps the ice from melting. The drier the sawdust is the better the ice will keep, and it is a good plan, as the ice is removed during the summer, to throw out from time to time the driest of the sawdust where it will be under cover and continue to dry out and thus be in better condition to be used again the following year. The ice should be cut in blocks of uniform size and packed as closely together as possible.

If it is necessary to erect a special ice house the roughest kind of a shed that will keep out the weather is all that is necessary. Poles may be driven into the ground and lined up on the inside with rough lumber, or slabs, leaving a space of about one-half inch between each board, and the whole covered with a roof to keep out the rain. Of course, the ice house may be built with a regular frame, lined inside with rough lumber and, if a more finished appearance is desired, it can be given plenty of ventilation above the ice. The same procedure should be followed in storing the ice and covering it with sawdust as advised in the preceding paragraph.

If sawdust cannot be obtained, planer mill shavings may be used for packing the ice, or in case where neither is available hay may be used as a packing or covering material.

Marsh or "slough" hay or any fine wild hay which grows in low places gives the best results. If hay is used, the space around the ice or between the ice and the walls instead of being only 1 foot, should be at least 2 feet, into which the hay must be well packed. The ice should also be covered with about 2 feet of the hay.

A PROPHECY BY HEINE.

He Foretold Germany's Madness 80 Years Ago.

The war Germany waged against the rest of humanity was prophesied about eighty years ago by a great poet of Germany, Heinrich Heine, according to an article by Alfred Panzini, which appeared in the Giornale D'Italia, a newspaper published in Rome, Italy.

This writer quotes, in a translation direct from the German, Heine's prophecy. Following are the most significant parts of the quotation:—

"You have, oh Frenchmen, no suspicion of what it (the German revolution) will be like; the German revolution will be neither milder nor sweeter because the criticism of Kant, the transcendental idealism of Fichte, the philosophy of the philosophers of nature, preceded it. These doctrines have developed revolutionary forces, and are only awaiting the opportune moment to explode and fill the world with terror and admiration. Then will appear the followers of Kant, who will no longer wish to hear piety mentioned when referring to the world of facts any more than they allowed of it in the world of ideas; and they will turn upside down with club and hatchet our entire European life in order to eradicate the very last vestige of the past. On the same scene, will come the followers of Fichte and, will be impossible for vain volatile romanticism to be dominated either by fear or by self-interest, for these philosophers put himself in connection with all the original powers of the earth, evokes the occult forces of German tradition, calls to life again the forces of the entire German pantheism, revivifies that fury of battle, which we find in the ancient Teutonic peoples which wished to fight not in order to overcome his enemy, but to fight simply for the sake of fighting.

"Then in that day, ah me! You will see! The God Thor will rise with his gigantic hammer and demolish the Gothic cathedrals. When you, oh, dear neighbor of France, shall hear the uproar and the tumult, be on your guard, and do not occupy yourselves at all with that which we in Germany will be doing, for you might get into grave trouble. Take care not to blow on the fire, take care also not to attempt to put it out, for you might burn your fingers. The peoples of Europe will group themselves as upon the steps of an amphitheatre around Germany to see a great and terrible game. I advise you, oh Frenchmen, to keep quiet, and above all, to take care not to applaud! We could so easily misinterpret your intentions, and push you a little brutally according to our coarse and impulsive way.

"You understand perfectly that when the wish comes to fight with you, the Germans will have no difficulty in finding an excuse on that occasion. I counsel you to be on the alert. Whatever happens in Germany, whether the royal prince of Prussia or Doctor Werth becomes dictator does not matter. You, oh Frenchman remain always armed, and remain quietly in your place but at attention. I have for you only good intentions, and was almost terrified when I heard just lately that your ministers were contemplating the disarmament of France."

Fragmentary bits of the prophecy were quoted by French and Italian newspapers at the time of the bombardment of the Rheims Cathedral, but in that form it lost its significance. Alfredo Panzini was the first to quote it in its entirety.

A Prelude to Oblivion. Religious fanatics are again busy prophesying the end of the world, arguing that the four years of war-horror is but a prelude to oblivion for everyone.

Meanwhile, however, the man in the street is not worrying. Perhaps he remembers the many occasions when the prophets have tried to make his flesh creep with similar bogies.

Now and again, however, people have taken them seriously. The appearance of comets has often been thought to foretell the speedy dissolution of this world. If the tail of a comet touched the earth we should all go up in smoke is the fantastic rumor which has been revived at intervals during recent years.

The story of the comet spread great alarm, however, throughout Europe in 1832, and many persons refrained from undertaking or concluding any business during that year, in consequence solely of their apprehension that the terrible comet would dash us and our world to atoms.

October 13th has been a favorite day for prophesying the end of the world. This has its origin in the prophecy of the famous mathematical divine, Dr. Whiston, who, in 1736, said the world would be destroyed in that year on October 13th.

Crowds of people assembled in the big open spaces of London on that date, nothing happened, and Winston became the laughing stock of the metropolis.

Schleswig Rich Land. Schleswig, the northern portion of the province, Schleswig-Holstein of Prussia, is adjacent to Denmark, says an exchange. The northern part of the former duchy is peopled mainly by Danes. Excellent harbors are on the eastern coast and the agricultural land is there also. The western coast consists of marshy but fertile marine alluvium. Agriculture is the chief occupation and much rye, wheat, barley and hay are produced. The province is famous for its excellent cattle, which are exported the world over for breeding purposes. Manufacturing industries are little developed. Its position relative to the Baltic Sea and the North Sea has increased its commercial importance to a great extent.

World's End Story Makes Many Insane

Detroit, Jan. 2.—According to the City Health Commissioner, about 40 cases of either temporary or permanent insanity in men or less violent form has resulted in Detroit the last few weeks directly traceable to recent statements attributed to Prof. Porta to the effect that the world would end December 17.

Anticipation of such an event served in many cases, according to the commissioner, Dr. Vaughan, to develop an acute mental condition in a mind already burdened with heavy worries or troubles of one sort or another.

In a number of instances of this "sentimental infection," as the malady is termed, loss of reason did not come on December 17 itself, but days after, and even weeks. Some may not have shown this latent condition even now, the Health commissioner asserts, but an irregular incident of some sort may serve to bring it out in minds whose resistance has been lowered by strain and abnormal excitement experienced preceding December 17.

"We had the same increase in mental diseases following the influenza epidemic," said Dr. Vaughan, but from a different reason. In the case of those who were recovering from influenza, the overdose of poison or toxemia, in the system, which had not been sufficient to cause death, remained in the body, and instead went to the nervous system, thus affecting the mind.

"It was abnormal excitement in both cases, however, which precipitated the condition. If people in general had not become so stirred up over the influenza epidemic, and so fearful of its after-effects, many cases of loss of reason might have been averted. The same holds true of the false rumor which was spread abroad concerning the end of the world. Mental condition plays an extremely large part in the health rate of any city."

IN BUSINESS FOR HIMSELF

"BEST MEDICINE FOR WOMEN"

What Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Did For Ohio Woman.

Portsmouth, Ohio.—"I suffered from irregularities, pains in my side and was so weak at times I could hardly get around to do my work, and as I had four in my family and three boarders it made it very hard for me. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound was recommended to me. I took it and it has restored my health. It is certainly the best medicine for women's ailments I ever saw."—Mrs. E. A. SHAW, R. No. 1, Portsmouth, Ohio.

Mrs. Shaw proved the merit of this medicine and wrote this letter in order that other suffering women may find relief as she did. Women who are suffering as she was should not drag along from day to day without giving this famous root and herb remedy, Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, a trial. For special advice in regard to such ailments write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Mass. The result of its forty years experience is at your service.
