A VISIT.

Art Thou wearied of Thy waiting. Patient, vearning Heart. Waiting, lonely in Thy prison From the world apart?

Does the silence grow oppressive In the chapel air, When no voice in pleading accents eathes to Thee a prayer.

Does no suppliant near Thee linger Thro' the waning day, Save the vigil lamp whose glowing Burns its life away?

Ah my God, the solemn stillness Of thy holy place; Stillness kept by unseen seraphs

Round Thy throne of grace! Let a home-sick heart approach Thee, All its pain outpour, Let me fall in adoration

Nigh Thy prison door; Feel the peaceful love-light stealing From Thy Heart divine, Hushing with its benediction The unrest of mine

I have heard the soothing music Of thy sweet behest; "Come, ye hearts awearied, burden Come to me and rest."

Rest I seek, and warmth, and shelter From the wilds of sin; Ope Thy arms, oh Love forgiving, Take a lost one in.

For Thy mercy is e'en broader Than hell's broadening way, And can lead to healing fountains Feet that weakly stray.
