How We Mould Our Lives.

BY RUTH CAMERON

"Oh, dear! Things never seem to go smoothly for me." I heard a woman say the other day. "I wonder what I have done to deserve to have such a troubled existence."

I think she should have said, "I wonder what I am," rather than "what have I done."

For she is one of those restless, excitable, ill-poised people for whom it is next to impossible that things should go smoothly.

How few of us are willing to recognize the fact that our temperaments help to shape our lives and make the conditions in which we live.

And yet how largely they do! "There is a Divinity that shapes our ends, rough-hew them how we will," has always been a favorite quotation with the sons and daughters of men.

I suppose because it so pleasantly shifts the responsibility from our unwilling shoulders and dumps it down on a sage personage who cannot very well refuse it.

The woman who was bewailing her troubled existence preferred to blame an angry Providence for her condition, rather than to look for the seat of it in her stormy petrel disposition, and yet right there she would have found the cause of much of her trouble. Some of the events that have Household Notes.

If a lamp chimney does not clean easily with soap and water, try wiping it off with a cloth wet in vinegar.

Crackers covered with grated cheese and toasted in the oven are good served with salad for luncheon. Dip tooth brushes in boiling water occasionally to disinfect them, and always rinse thoroughly after using.

Dried bay berries and leaves thrown on the fire will fill a room with a pleasant and lasting fragrance.

To pop corn successfully, first put it in a sieve and dash cold water over it. The kernels will be large and flaky.

If a ribbon slips out from the underwear beading, try sewing a little round lace button on each end of the ribbon.

If soft-boiled eggs remain from breakfast, boil them hard at once, then they can be used in salads or fish sauces.

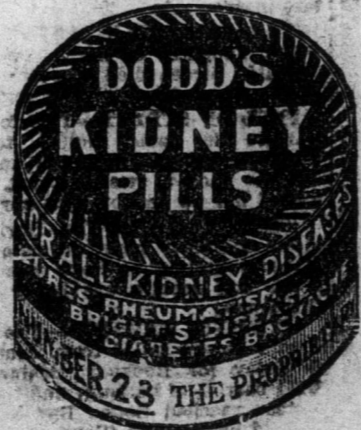

When washing a chiffon or net veil make a warm suds of good white soap and dip the veil in and out a great many times.

A fireless cooker is a boon to the woman doing her own housework, and especially if she wishes to reduce Sunday labor.

In packing pictures, they should be placed inside two layers of excelsior, then wrapped separately in newspaper and tied.

Never keep vegetables in the cooking water after they are done; pour out at once and let the vegetables dry in the pot.

To mark bed linen and towels quickly and effectively, draw the initial in outline on the article and sew coronation braid on it.

kept her from having smooth sailing in her life do seem to have been gratuitous gifts from an evil star, but have come from where better poised people would find smooth sailing.

She thinks her next-door neighbor is blessed of Providence in having a most serene and undisturbed life. She fails to recognize that much of that serenity is in the woman herself rather than in the conditions of her life.

or rather, that it is "that serenity of character which his helped to make the conditions serene."

"How I wish I didn't have to hurry so, but things seem to happen so that I'm always in a rush," is another woman's complaint. "I wonder by the way what we should ever do without that long-suffering word 'happen'."

This woman is one of those people who are always trying to do more than they possibly can, and, as an inevitable is always vainly trying to catch up with herself.

She has to hurry, she says, and never realizes that her only task master is her own habit of trying to do too much. Of course she could eliminate enough from her life to make it normal, but no one could convince her of that. She thinks it is the force of circumstances that drives her on at that desperate pace, while really it is nothing but the force of temperament.

So, if you want to change the conditions and temper of your life, look within as well as without—you will probably find as powerful causes in the one place as the other.

TWENTY YEARS.

Makes a great difference in most women. They are troubled with "nerves"—they suffer from headache, sleeplessness, a sensation of irritability or twitching, hot flashes, dizzy spells, or many other symptoms of female weakness. The local disorder and inflammation should be treated with Dr. Pierce's Lotion Tablets and the irregularity and weakness of the female system corrected and strengthened with Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. The strain upon the young woman or the woman of middle age—upon the nerve and blood forming structures—and strength-giving nerve and regulator. For over forty years sold by druggists for women's peculiar weaknesses and distressing ailments. The one remedy so perfect in composition and so good in curative effects as to warrant its makers in printing its every ingredient on its outside wrapper. The one remedy which absolutely contains neither alcohol nor injurious or habit-forming drugs.

Following letter selected at random from a large number of similar ones and cited merely to illustrate these remarks: "In the winter of 1898, I became greatly run down and irregular," writes Mrs. Henry Scott, of Swan Creek, Mich., Route 1, Box 44. "I slowly but surely grew worse, and at last, resolved to apply to the doctor for help. The doctor said I had inflammation, enlargement and infection. I was in bed eleven weeks and got no better. The doctor said I would have to have an operation, but to find I would not listen. My husband purchased two bottles of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. When I had taken three bottles I could feel myself gaining, so I dropped the doctor and took Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. Only for it I think I would have been dead—I really believe it saved my life. I feel better now than in twenty years."

Mrs. Scott.

After clothes are sprinkled with water and laid away in the clothes basket for ironing, they should be covered with a heavy blanket.

Never use a penknife or sharp instrument for cleaning the nails. A blunt nail-cleaner will keep the inside of the nails smooth and clear.

Some men never wear collars at all except to hide the footprints of the safety razor or touch somebody for two bits.

The heathen children of other lands do not have to bother with the collar in any form. The South Sea islander, for instance, never has to tackle a three-inch collar with his mouth twisted over back of his left ear, and then crawl under an iron bed with a box of safety matches, in search of a bone collar button. The unlettered Hottentot can go around all day in the burning rays of the sun without harboring the fear that his collar will give way at the knees and faint inward on both sides. The Hottentot is a happy person, free from clothes and carking care, and yet we are spending large sums annually in the attempt to introduce him to the wing collar and the treacherous gully-button.

Nearly all men keep their collars in an ornamental box, which is pawed over several times a week in the effort to locate the 1913 models. Just as soon as a man discovers a collar which can be worn without starting an incipient riot among the office force, he will find that some eager mental in the steam laundry has stepped upon it with a hot iron and rendered it unfit for the company of decent people. He then puts on a design four years old and covers it up with a Jersey sweater.

Collars.

BY H. L. RANN.

A collar is the top story of a shirt, and can be removed without dislocating anything but the Adam's apple.

They are not worn for pleasure, but in order to conceal the obtrusive mole and other defects. Some men never wear collars at all except to hide the footprints of the safety razor or touch somebody for two bits.

St. Bernard Dogs Rescue Crown Prince.

Geneva, Switzerland, Dec. 20.—The story of how Crown Prince Alexander of Serbia was rescued from death in the Alpine snows last winter, while training himself for service with the army in the field, has just been made known by the Abbot of the St. Bernard monastery.

"The monks and the dogs were on watch in the St. Bernard Pass, as is usual on bad nights, when one of the dogs discovered two men overcome in the snow and half-buried by the drifting flakes. The men were taken to the monastery, when they told they were Prince Alexander and his adjutant, a Serbian captain.

The Prince, in explaining his singular position to the abbot, said that he being a soldier and expecting early service in the field, desired to harden his body by exposure under difficult circumstances, and had, therefore, undertaken climbing excursions in the Alps.

The abbot received lately a letter from the Prince, written in camp, saying that he and his adjutant were in good health.

Dogs as Detectives.

An Sniff Quail Even Through Leather of Split Case.

To stop the smuggling of quail across the Oklahoma-Kansas line, the use of bird dogs as detectives has been started by three railroad companies in Southern Kansas and Northern Oklahoma. Shipping quail by smugglers from one state to another is illegal, and the railroads are held responsible for game thus transported. Trainmen have been unable to discover the quail in the suit cases so often used for transportation, and it occurred to some of the employees of the roads that trained bird dogs would be able to scent the birds even through the leather of the cases, and the experiment of using them for the purpose succeeded so well that the rule has been adopted by the railroads, and the dog detectives are likely to break up this method of smuggling.

Found Whole Family Dead in Home.

New York, Dec. 23.—Fearing that something was wrong after calling a second time at the home of Martin McGreevy in Brooklyn yesterday, the girl chum of his daughter Mary, 21 years old, notified a policeman who found the entire family, father, daughter and son, Martin McGreevy, Jr., 18 years old, dead, and a disconnected gas tube in the kitchen. Realizing their danger, apparently, while still partly conscious, all three had left their beds and attempted to escape from the gas. The young woman, having reached a window which she opened before death overtook her.

Education By Shopping.

On certain days some half-dozen or so of girls from a technical school in London district go out with one of their teachers, and spend a day in the shops. Under this experienced guidance they walk from one street to another and study windows. London supplies immense facilities; and these young people of the Metropolis are gaining knowledge that ought speedily to put them on the same level as their Parisian sisters.
