

Pains Quit! Back-Soreness Goes, Torturous Lumbago Cured by "Nerviline"

This Wonderful Curative Linctament Has Almost Magical Powers.

You can compare a congestive pain to a little fire. When congestion smoulders, pain comes and goes. Congestion grows into inflammation, but pain, now intense, grows excruciating and stays, too. There is an absolute antidote of pain—it is Nerviline.

Not an ache or a pain anywhere that it cannot reach. No soreness or strain that it has not the power to relieve.

Nerviline is the only remedy in the world sold under guarantee—if it does not relieve you, you get your money back. Proof enough that Nerviline is a remedy that will fulfill absolutely every requirement of a pain-reliever, both for internal and external use.

War-Train Controller.

Sir Herbert Walker's Great Task.

There are scores of eminent men whose names are not much before the general public, but who are working hard behind the scenes to see our "contemptible little army" through. Among them is Sir Herbert Walker, the general manager of the London and South-Western Railway.

It is no exaggeration to say that the transportation of our troops to France would have been impossible but for the wonderful organizing abilities of this great expert. As chairman of the Railway Executive Committee, which now arranges the whole work of railways under Government supervision all over the Kingdom, he is responsible for the safe transport of stores, ammunition, and food across to France, the conveyance of vast quantities of coal from ports to inland towns, and the enormous work of keeping the whole of the British Isles plentifully supplied with the necessities of life.

Since the war no less than 15,000 special trains conveying troops have been run on the London and South-Western Railway, as well as 2,500 fully-equipped led cross trains carrying our wounded. So wonderfully have these cars been constructed that a serious operation could actually be performed whilst the train was going at a speed of thirty miles an hour.

Sir Herbert was originally intended for the medical profession, but he preferred the engineering shop to the operating theatre. He finally abandoned the idea of becoming a doctor and entered the service of the London and North-Western Railway.

It was not long before he gained recognition, and in 1910 he was appointed outdoor goods manager.

The offer of the high position of general manager of the London and South-Western Railway in 1910 caused quite a flutter in railway circles.

Naturally when a young man is appointed to a post of such great responsibility there are doubts or misgivings in the minds of old and important servants of the company as to the ability of their new chief.

Sir Herbert Walker allows no slackers to be near him, but has every respect for the energetic workman, and he is as willing to receive sound advice as he is to give it, when it is worth having.

Since the war no patriot could have done more for his country. Sir Herbert may well be proud of the fact that no fewer than 3,900 of his men are with the colors and "doing their bit." He has placed some of his company's best workshops at the disposal of the Ministry of Munitions and he has sent many of his skilled workmen to make shells.

And Sir Herbert has not forgotten the wives and children of his men now fighting. He is forwarding payments to the families left at home.

Your Boys and Girls.

A certain father who hasn't forgotten his childhood days was marred by a cheerless room, fitted with cast-off flnery and by constant injunctions not to do this or that for fear he break some things, has originated a juvenile paradise for his own son.

The room, on the third floor of the home, is a bright, sunny place, well ventilated with several windows, which are safely barred. One end of the hardwood floor has been left uncovered, while over the other part is laid a soft thick woolen rug fastened down securely. This serves as an arena for acrobatic feats, or other romping.

There is no breakable bric-a-brac about, only a few brass bowls and trays for trinkets. The built-in bookcase, where favorite books and magazines abound, have no glass doors and no silk curtains that may be broken or torn from the rings, so the boy is not haunted by the fear of breaking things, and even a mild game of baseball harms nothing.

"Through German Spectacles."

At The Current Events Club.

Mrs. F. W. Ayre read an interesting paper at the Reading Room of the Current Events Club, Saturday afternoon entitled: "Through German Spectacles." The paper, which was highly interesting, consisted partly of newspaper clippings showing the points from which the Hun views the present European War. At the close of the address several of the ladies spoke on the subject. Teas were served by Mrs. J. Harvey. On the first Saturday in January a debate on "The Duty of Daughters to Parents" will take place, when the principal speakers will be Mesdames A. Macpherson, Cooper and R. A. Squires.

There is nothing better for keeping the hands soft and in good condition than lemon juice.
