Mesopotamia and India.

Vigorous measures are being taken in Mesopotamia to restore order and relieve beleaguered garrisons preliminary to the drawing up by Sir Percy Cox of some scheme of Arab self-government. More troops are being sent from India, and the Maharajah of Kapurthala has generously placed his infantry at the disposal of the Imperial Government. This action is in striking contrast with the spirit of extremists like Mr. Gandhi, who has induced the National Congress to pass a resolution refusing to co-operate in the working of India's new institutions. India's idealist friends are her worst enemies. The resolution will be repudiated, but it makes for disquiet and uncertainty when every nerve should be strained in the interest of peace and order. An appointment carrying the dependency a step further towards Dominion status is that of Sir William Meyer as India's first High Commissioner, in London. Regarding the frontier, the Viceroy is able to make a reassuring report. The repercussion of Bolshevik energies will no doubt be felt for long, but if Lord Chelmsford is well advised the Soviet emissaries who hope to entangle the Amir will get short shrift. Afghanistan desires to restore former relations with the British Raj. The news is none the less satisfactory, notwithstanding that the announcement of the notorious Enver Pasha's appointment as Bolshevik Generalissimo of forces marching on India has probably not disturbed the night's rest of a single subaltern—United Empire.

The Stranger Tumbled!

M. Poincare is fond of telling this story against himself.

One bitterly cold day the winter before last (he says) I was walking hurriedly down the almost deserted Bois de Boulogne, the collar of my overcoat turned up about my ears, my head bent down against the stinging blast.

I wanted to know the time, but I was unwilling to unbutton my overcoat in order to get at my watch. Just then I saw a man of well-dressed appearance coming along.

I perceived that he was buttoned up just as I was. Nevertheless, such is the selfishness of human nature, when he arrived opposite to me I touched my hat, politely and said: "Sir, do you know what time it is?"

The stranger paused, removed his right glove, unbuttoned his coat from top to bottom, unbuttoned his undercoat, and finally pulled out his watch, while the cold wind beat against him.

Holding up the timepiece he scrutinised it an instant, and said: "Yes!" Then he passed on without another word.

He had evidently seen through my little ruse, and acted accordingly. It served me right.
