that Mr. J. D. Rockefeller, Sr., lets play over his remarks at times. He is always very earnest.

'Let us think of life as a stream and ourselves as men in boats on that stream," he admonished an audience last summer. "There are hree groups of men, and the first group is represented by a man wit pars who lies back in his boat and looks at the sky, letting his boat and drift. He is the type of man who is always saying that he is not adequately paid and is computing the high cost of living. The man of the second class starts to pull upstream, but turns and joins the pleasure seekers. In the third class s the man who keeps on pulling uptream and finally arrives.

At another time young Mr. Rockeeller said: "You young men, just entering upon a business career or studying, preparatory to business life, what is to be your stand If you do as little as possible and merely keep the letter of your contract, you are not going to be asked o become partners in the firm. But if you live and act according to the spirit you will not have to look long for a position.

Threatened With Consumption.

Physicians no longer speak uberculosis as "inherited," they know that what is inherited is not the disease, but a lowered power of resistance. When a child of any sort of physical weakness in his immediate family, he does not often have the particular form of disease that his parents or grand-parents had; but he usually has a onstitution favorable to the growth of disease germs.

The germ of tuberculosis is everywhere about us, ready to take advantage of any opportunity, and especially of the opportunity that is offered by the naturally diminished resistance of rapidly growing young people. Given a family history sceptibility to disease in a lad of ourteen years of age, who is growor indulges to excess in athletics and who has the cheerful disregard of the laws of health so natural in a boy of that age, and no farmer could prepare his land for a particwlar crop more scientifically than that lad is being prepared for his
