SHOT AND CLUBBED TO DEATH

Result of Post-Mortem Examination-Government Sends Detective to Assist in Case.

Collingwood, May 29.-From the postmortem examination made vesterday by Dr. A. M. McFaul, on the body of Glory Whalen, it was apparent that no outrage had been committed, although this may have originally been the motive for the crime. Glory was wearing a flat hat, tied under the chin, and the blow with the club had been given over this kat. The post-mortem showed that underneath the scalp, the top of the head, where the club had fallen, there was blood and serum. The bullet had entered the right side at the back of the head. passed right through the skull, and lodged beneath the skin over the left eye. It was extracted by Dr. Mc-Faul, and found to be from a 38-caliber revolver. The bullet was hardly flattened at all. The murder must have taken place shortly after 8 o'clock Wednesday morning, while Glory was on her way to school, for she never reached Collingwood that day. No distinct traces of footprints or sign of a struggle in the bush could be found, but there was a heavy rainfall Wednesday night, which might easily have obliterated any sign. The moss and grass on which the dead's child's head rested were saturated with blood It is a curious thing that a shot could have been fired at that hour of the morning and within such a short distance of the Kendall farm and yet no-

KNOCKED DOWN AND SHOT. It was when an examination was made that the brutality of the crime became apparent. Glory Whalen had evidently first been struck down with a club and then deliberately shot in the back of the head. The club itself, a cedar stick two feet and a half long, and as thick as a man's wrist, with the bark still on, was picked up by Chief of Police Wilde a few feet away body. According to the chief of police, the club had been cut with a jackknife from a small cedar which stood a little distance away, the marks on it showing that it had been freshly cut. A common white handkerchief, not belonging to Glory, was bound tightly around her head, whoever committed the deed having evidently blindfolded the girl. It had partially slipped, however, and only the right eye was cov-This handkerchief is apparently the only clue to the perpetrator in the possession of the authorities, but it may prove to be an important one. That robbery was not the motive for the murder is evident.
