"Oh, Jane! You don't think he would steal the eggs and make holes in the flower beds, do you?"
"Fiddlesticks! Ain't you got no sense at all, Melancey? A body might as well talk to a clothes prop as you! I said the dog would steal the eggs, an' I shouldn't put up with it, an' I should tell the old bachelor so, too. Now do you under

Meanwhile the old bachelor next door was taking a survey of the situation. "Two women folks, and one of them an old maid, I'll bet a pocketknife. The other looks like she night be a widow, from allus dressing in black. Thunder! What did I ever move in here for? Paid six months' rent, too! Confound it all, a man ain't safe anywhere hardly these days. Of course they'll both be a setting their caps to ketch me—but I won't be caught! I'll keep out of their way as much as possible, and even if I meet one of 'em face to face and even if I meet one of 'em face to face I'll look another way. I see they keep a parcel of old hens, too. If any of 'em some a-scratching about here I'll set the dog on 'em, sure. I ain't going to be pestered by old maids or their hens, either. I've hired a man servant a purpose to keep out of their clutches, and I aint a going to be took in by the smartest woman that ever lived.'

Finding himself pursued, the puppy at cnee released the leghorn rooster's tail, which he had been playfully shaking to the great disgost of its owner, and with a bark of delight seized the edge of Miss Jane's homespun petticoat which showed beneath the rim of her dress, and shook it energet.

Over the rea, gravelly walk, over the tidy border of blackberry lilies and Iris werst-color, round and round he whirled, dexterously avoiding the avenging foe, until at last he espied Bonaparte, the big gray cat, leisurely taking his morning walk. Whereupon he at once dropped the broom and gave chase to the cat. Bonaparte fled up a tree in great terror, and Miss Peaslee, soizing the demoralized broom, made a sudden sortie on the dog. Curly, however, discovering this rear at-tack in the nick of time, scuttled swiftly across the yard and through the fence to his master's domain, where he immediately unearthed a half-gnawed bone from its hiding-place and proceeded to solace him-

After a desperate struggle the sisters succeeded in rescuing all that remained of —a coat. A man's coat of fine, heavy, dark cloth, hopicssly lated by the teeth and claws of the frome puppy.

"Dear me, it's plum ruined," cried Melancy. "It must belong to the ole bachelor and the dog has stolett." And the surveyed it regretfully, holding it up by the tails.

"But—what's that?"

But-what's that ?" "That" was something that had dropped ent of one of the pockets. Jane seized it quickly. It was a letter. "Why, Melancey," she cried, breath-lessly, "it—it's directed to me!" And Jane oponed it and read:

My Dear Miss Peaslee: I never popped the question in my life before, so I don't know the proper way. But if you are willing to be my wife jest say so, an I'll be the happiest man in Honey Locust Holler.

A Threat Cure.

Perhaps the most extraordinary success that has been achieved in modern science has been attained by the Dixon treatment for catarrh. attained by the Dixon treatment for catarrh. Out of 2000 patients treated during the past six menths, fully ninety per cent. have been cured of this stubborn malady. This is none the less startling when it is remembered that not five por cent. of the patients presenting themselves to the regular practitioner are benefitted, while the patient medicines and other advertised cures never record a cure at all. Starting with the claim now generally believed by the most scientific men that the disease is due to the presence of living parasites in the tissues, Mr. Dixon at once adapted nis care to their extermination; this accomplished, the catarrh is practically cured, and the permanency is unquestioned, as cures effected by him four years ago are cures still. No one cise has ever attempted to cure catarrh in this manner, and no other treatment has ever cured catarrh. The application of the remedy is simple and can be done at home, and the presentsesson of the year is the most favorable for a speedy and permanent cure, the majority of cases being cured at one treatment. Sufferers should correspond with Mesers. A. H. DIXON & SON, 25 King street west, Toronto, Canada, and enclose stamp for their treatise on extarrh.—Montreal Star, 26
