THE OLD DAME SCARES HER NAME SAKE HALF TO DEATH.

The Deputy Registrar of Peterboro Was Afraid Re'd "Upset the Constitution," and He Has a Wife and Seven Children - The Pathetic Testimony of a Frightened Witness Before the Public

Accounts Committee, The Public Accounts Committee of the Legislature had a field day on Saturday, when the Registrars of East Northumberland and Peterborough, whose attendance they have been so long endeavoring to secure, were up for examination. Dr. Mallory, Registrar of East Northumberland, stated in regard to the accusation that he had returned under the item of expenses $500 for extra work done by himself, that the work was really done by his deputy, though put in his name. The deputy had ted this course because it had been done by his predecessor. As a rule he had given more than the time required to the duties of his office. He admitted having gone to Algoma to take part in the Dominion election campaign of '91, but claimed that he had the right to take a holiday, as he had had none for several years. His gross income from his medical practice might be about $1500; his net income from that source was about $500. He managed the business of the drug store of Spalsbury & Co., but the actual work was done by a clerk. He himself was a licensed pharmacist, but the clerk was not. He also owned a newspaper.

A Scared Deputy. Henry Grundy, deputy registrar of Peterboro, a depressed, nervous-looking man, next took the stand. He answered the ions put to him by Mr. Whitney in a very low tone of voice and with much hesi-tation. He stated that the work of comtation. He stated that the work of comparing was not regularly done. Documents stamped as having been compared had turned out to be incorrect. Probably the number of such in his experience was 200 to 250. Outside parties had changed the wording of documents after registration. In some cases instruments had been registered without the fees being paid. Documents of his own had been registered and not charged for, and also one for Mr. Stratton, M.L.A., and in some other cases.

M.L.A., and in some other cases.

Then Mr. Whitney began to press him erry hard as to any conversations he had held with anyone about the testimony he would give. The reluctance of the witness increased and for some time he refused to answer. Chairman Awrey said he must answer any questions put.

Mustn't Compromise the Government. "It's a pretty hard thing," said the witness athetically, "for a man to be placed in a sition like this. I have a wife and seven children, and when I go back to Peterboro to-morrow I may be told that I'm not wanted." He went on to say that he had called on Mr. Stratton to ask him as to the examination. "Mr. Stratton said that I wouldn't want to complicate the Government—that I mustn't say anything detrimental to the Government.

When cross-examined by Mr. Harcourt the witness said that Stratton asked him about Registrar Morrow's attendance, whether he could say that he was a constant attendant during office hours, on which he replied that he could not.
"Now, are you insinuating that Mr. Stratton didn't want you to tell the truth?"

Speaking Against His Bread and Butter. "Yes, sir," replied the witness decisively. "Yes, sir," replied the witness decisively.
"I know I'm sitting here and speaking against my bread and butter," he added.
He went on to say that the changes made in documents subsequent to registration were all of minor character not affecting the important parts of the instruments.

When questioned as to others with whom he had spoken about his coming to give evidence he replied, "I suppose I must have spoken to 150 people? It was town talk. Everybody who came to the office would have something to say about it." On being further urged by Mr./Harcourt to remember what had been said and to give further names, he burst out in the desperation of a timid, nervous man worried beyond endurance.

Terribly Worried Over It. "If you talk to me like that I won't answer you a word. You can't browbeat me! I'm pretty sick of this business. I've been terribly worried over it."

Chairman Awrey assured him that no harm would come to him.

"Why, how can I remember what everyone said to me about it? It was the regular talk of the street. Why, one of the lawyers said if Grundy went up to Toronto he'd upset the constitution!"

Of course this raised a general laugh, and considerable chaffing ensued, and Grundy, seeing the situation was not so desperately serious as he had imagined, looked reassured,

Mr. Grundy has evidently been a victim Mr. Grundy has evidently been a victim to some of his fellow-townsmen's love of sport, who have depicted all sorts of imaginable legal terrors as likely to result in case his evidence was unsatisfactory to the powers that be. The examination was continued for some time further, but was continued for some time further, but nothing of importance was elicited.

Registrar Morrow was let off easily by the inquisitors. He stated that he did not know of any cases in which documents stamped "compared" were incorrect copies. No documen s were so stamped unless the important parts had been compared. With No documen s were so stamped unless the important parts had been compared. With the exception of Deputy Grundy's documents, he only remembered three cases in which documents were registered without being paid for.

Mr. Stratton will be called on to give a strategy and the strategy of t

R. Coohran received following from Kennett, Hopkins & Co.:
CHICAGO, Ill., April 21.—There is a lingering suspicion that there may be a chunk of dynamice in the long interest for May still unliquidated. The liability of an explosion next week has induced conservative traders, who naturally take the long side, to keep out of the market until after the May holdings shall have been placed where they will no longer be a disturbing element. Outside of California, where the drought, is unbroken, crop reports almost uniformly
