one who would wish to practice the art with success himself, or understand when well practiced for him by others. To combine as far as practicable the portion of this knowledge which I conceive to be most useful and necessary for the study of the Canadian Agriculturist, is the object of the treatise which I have now nearly ready for the press, and the plan of which I submit with great deference to the consideration of all these engaged in the art.—

The sources from which I have made selections ere the modern British and French Authors, of decided reputation and merit, with my own observations. reputation and merit, with my own observations and experience, during my early years in the occu-

The first part will give a short view of the origin progress, and present state of Agriculture, among some of the ancient and modern nations, particularly Great Britain, France, Flanders, the United States &c. 1 sm aware the past state of Agriculture can delittle more than gratify the curiosity. Net so its Inthe more than gratify the curiosity. Net so its present state, which is calculated both to excite our curiosity and affect our interests. There is probably no country which I shall refer to, that does not possess some animal or vegetable production, or pursue some mode of culture, or management, that might be beneficially introduced into Canada; but with the exception of the countries I have named, and parts of Italy and Switzerland, there are no very interesting Reports of the Agriculture of other parts of Europe, with which I am acquainted at present. The second part will exhibit a concise view of the science of Agriculture, and the principles on which the operations and results thereof are founded. The third, and remaining parts, will apply these pridciples to the practice of Agriculture, adapting them to the climate and other cincumstances of Canada; and conclude with a few observations on that perion of the trade and commerce of this country in which farmers may be directly or indirectly increased. ittle more than gratify the curiosity. Convinced as I feel, that the produce of Agriculture of this countries of this countries of this countries. Convinced as I feel, that the produce of Agriculture is the only riches that the people of this country can call their own, and which they never can be deprived of, it has often astonished me, that men of liberal education should, in general, appear so little to regard its indrovement or prosperity—in fact, it is tracted as a subject quite remote from common, life by nearly all who are not immediately or gaged in it. They, perhaps, cannot allow the messives to believe that Agriculture sione can furnish the means by which trade and commerce can be carried on successfully in Canada.

As a work of this description cannot be published in English and French without incurring considerable expense, it would be necessary for me to have as many subscribers as would insure my expenses. Subscription lists will be left at the several Book Stores in Montreal. The work, I expect, will not exceed four parts, at Is 3d, each part. The first part to be published when there are a sufficient number of Subscribers. I expect the whole might be published before the first of May next.

The four parts will contain from 250 to 300 pages and may be bound in one volume. I shall do all in my power to make the book worthy of the particular of the particular of the series of those who practice the art.
