

time we shall not equal them. But as we have never for a moment permitted ourselves to doubt that the enterprise will be sustained, so may we reasonably hope that, in a very short time, we shall have our magazine in all things equal to the most popular of its rivals.

In such circumstances, we trust, we may appeal to the whole community for support. The experiment is one in which all who are friends to literature in Canada are interested—and we may add, that those who desire to see the finer branches of art cultivated and flourishing among us, are also interested in the developement of the question; for although, at present, we must be supplied with engravings from other countries, it is only a beginning which is required to assure us that our own country will contribute something towards the advancement of the arts, even as already she has made no inconsiderable additions to the more substantial comforts of mankind.

In conclusion, we have only to state, that there will be no number of the Garland issued in December, it being intended to begin the new series in January, in order that the whole of each volume may, in future, be comprised within the year.

END OF THE FOURTH VOLUME.
