EDITORIAL CHAT.

THE Detroit Convention is a thing of the past, and those photographers who were enterprising enough to attend have returned home filled with new ideas in most every branch of their profession.

THE pictures shown, while not as numerous as in some other years, were conceded by all to be far ahead in quality. Everything went off smoothly, if we may except a slight dissatisfaction as to the prize awards in one or two instances.

WHENEVER prizes are given, especially, it seems, in a photographic exhibition, grumbling will be heard and dissatisfaction felt. Even when it is arranged that everyone gets a prize, the feeling will be found ranking in the minds of some that they should have been placed higher or secured more.
