In this country it is so customary for by-elections to favor the govern that a reverse is more than usually significant. The fall of the Dominion government in 1896 was indicated by the loss of several by-elections. The matter is serious, and no one is deceived by efforts to belittle it.

In endeavoring to assign the causes of the defeat, the Liberal journals do not agree as to the influence of Mr. Gamey. The Kingston Whig speaks of the defection of Mr. Findlay and other Liberals in the riding, and says that Mr. Hale's attitude was one of "singular indifference." All these things point to that cooling enthusiasm and slack-ening effort which usually precede the

The Globe should ask itself if there was any deeper depth to which our politics could sink than the election methods that carried West Elgin, North Grey and Sault Ste. Marie. It has been Grey and Sault Ste. Marie. It has been the purchase of Sault Ste. Marie which bulks so largely in the free trade armory. Yet is it not the free trade armory. Yet is it not the cars that subjects citizens to discomplication to the whole question of our fort and inconvenience, but a touching concern which the company manifests for the health of the people of Toronto.

Mr. Bicknell makes it clear that the company in its kindness of heart would take to put the masses on an equal plane with the favored sons of fortune.

After some business with regard to the affairs of the association had been discussed and settled, the whole party abandoned themselves to a hearty frolic. It was strictly a feminine function, but this feature was not visible to a casual observer, as a number of the young ladies present had—whisper!—donned male attire. As is usual at such affairs, the unitles were utterly disregarded and sylph-like football players were seen gally pirouetting around with dainty maidens of ten centuries ago. After four hours of unalloyed fun each of the fair participants took the back route home.
