Between 400 and 500 water meters in the city have been broken by the frost, and the repair gangs of the waterworks department are busily engaged in repairs.

"This is an unusual number," said General Manager Buchanan. "It shows that cellars have been very cold, as the meters are all located inside the buildings. Another side light shows that the people who waste water have no meters. Had the owners of meters allowed their taps to run, the meters would not have been frozen. Those without meters allow them to run, and thus prevent freezing."
