PRESENT OPERA IN GOOD STYLE

St. John Amateurs Give Excellent Presentation of Lily of Killarney—Same New Voices

Let one forget the little things here and there that always adversely mark the first night of an amateur performance, and then write down the production of the Lily of Killarney in the Opera House last night, before a large audience, as a great success. It was a big undertaking for the local singers, this entry into opera, but any misgivings that existed were swept away last night and with the nervousness of a first performance gone, the remaining productions of the week should be even better.

The Lily of Killarney tells the story of Hardress O'Gean and the Colleen Maheen. It is in three acts and follows the play closely. It was presented by an excellent cast supported by a good chorus, with voice settings in admirable taste and with the performers appropriately and nicely costumed. The stage pictures were such as to draw the eye to the various scenes. This was particularly the case in the opening scene.

The part of Hardress O'Gean was played by James Conlon who is following in the footsteps of others of his family in stage work. He made a fine appearance, acted excellently and sang with good effect in solo, duet or trio.

Miss Arline Lloyd, whose singing has before been enjoyed, played Lily O'Connor with much charm and won golden opinions. Much of the heavy singing work falls to her lot and she acquitted herself in a manner that left nothing desired. Her voice is very pleasing and her natural, delivered her lines well and acted excellently while she pleased all in the singing of her part and in the rendering of her scenes.

Miss Josephine Fitzpatrick won merit and applause in the part of Ann Chit and for her solo Killarney and the Kerry Dance.

Miss Nellie McGrath well played the role of Sheila, Danny Mann's mother. The young ladies received handsome bouquets.

Myra Coppaleen was well cared for by David Higgins whose talent is well known. He sang in his usual good style and in his acting added to the good name won in previous performances.

Harold McGuire gave a fine character sketch of Mr. McGuire and William Fyne was excellent in diction and action in the role of Father Tom. Robert Ross as O'Moore, Barton Wetmore as Hyland and Thomas Morrey as the butler did their share of the work well.

As Danny Mann, the most exciting role in the performance, Harold Monahan, in his first appearance before an audience carried off high honors. From his first note his rich, ringing baritone held the audience and every piece of work won hearty applause. This was especially so in the second act where he holds the stage in a long, difficult solo with a call on the performer for considerable acting power. He did it in mastery style and won an ovation.

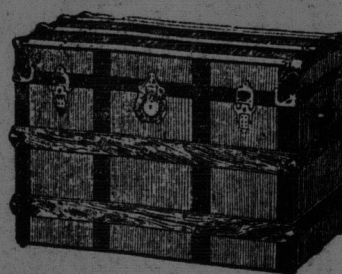

In the second act a charming ballet, Will of the Wisp was introduced by a group of young misses with Miss Rhona Lloyd leading. Her dance was very cleverly done.

M. L. Harrison's orchestra played for the opera with Miss Marion Hogan capably filling the part of pianist. The whole was directed by John Lloyd, who also trained principals and chorus and to whom the results of his work must have been very pleasing. The choruses were: Mrs. John McDonald, Jr., Mrs. James Barry, Mrs. Edward Finnegan, Mrs. John Lloyd and Mrs. Henry Regan. The committee of management was composed of:—Director, John Lloyd; stage manager, Steve Hurley; property man, Bernard Stafford; stage carpenter, Jas. Ryan; advertising agent, J. J. Toole.

Those in the choruses and otherwise assisting were: Chorus—Gentlemen: Francis I. McCaffrey, John Morrissey, David Higgins, Gerald O'Neill, Francis Hazel, Harold Kane, Francis O'Leary, George Flood, Harold Monahan, Ernest T. Clarke, James Conlon, Robert Ross, Barton Wetmore, Harold McGuire.

Chorus—Ladies: Genevieve O'Brien, Kathleen O'Malley, Mary Killoran, Annie Magee, Martina Wallace, Kathryn Wallace, Nora Deisenberg, Geraldine Moore, Eleanor Wallace, Augusta Wallace, Gertrude Morris. Nan McDade, Jennie Ste-
