CLEVELAND

Brooklyn's inability to Cost Them the Game Series at Yesterday

Cleveland, Ohio, Oct. 12.—Cleveland American League Club, the supreme baseball title to afternoon when the Indians the Brooklyn Nationals in the deciding game of the 1920 series by a score of 3 to 0.

Cleveland is celebrating in the hall on Monday evening. Mr.

Spitball Pitcher

The shut-out victory was engineered by Stanley Coveleski, who proved his remarkable endurance during the series by an airtight defense on the team-mates at the critical moments of the game. The spitball batters accumulated five hits but two Brooklyners reached second base during the game, and but two invaders were left on the base.

Coveleski's feat in winning the championship for Cleveland down as one of the outstanding features of world's series history in several seasons. Thenceforward the "over" in the twenty-seven in which he felled on the field let the Robins down with in the first game at Brooklyn, allowed them a second tally on Sunday and shut them out today.

Great Demonstration

Today the demonstration marked the final cut-out of and clinched the championship. Indians surpassed any similar feat in several seasons. Thenceforward the "over" in the twenty-seven in which he felled on the field let the Robins down with in the first game at Brooklyn, allowed them a second tally on Sunday and shut them out today.

Tris Speaker, sensing the outburst of enthusiasm, made from centre-field toward the stand, where his mother and other relatives occupied a lower tier of progress was slow, but once he reached the rail he vaulted over the front and into his mother's arms, a small school boy. The scene was unusual for a moment the complete cessation of the cheering, however, broke out with vigor when Mrs. Speaker hugged and kissed her grey-haired and the latter responded in a which indicated that he regarded mother's approval far above any rewards that might come to his result of the victory of his team.
