whatever I may have felt like exclaiming and did nothing but stare. Reed was pronderous, there was lors of him, you see, but he was straight and built proportionately, and as for Mark — well he was just Mark Twdin and amoked a fat black cigar.

"It slunks in behind the pair and followed up hill, When we got to Charlotte street, Reed sort of squared around, and pointing over toward Coburg street hill, remarked freezingly:

"There's another we can climb."

Now, Mark, who had been scrutinizing no where in particular, suddenly glanced toward his companion—a glance part funcreal pity, part alarmed distress: "My God," said he, and that was all.

A citizen was one evening last week returning to the cheery comforts of his handsome home from the outer desolation and arctic dreariness of a cold, rainy, April night. As he turned to ascend to his door he was surprised at hearing sounds proceeding from a front room such as would be made by Carrie Nation in a bar room. The full interescent of the room. Dire possibilities and forebodings growded in upon his brain, but as he reached the door, those of an order to the content of the room of the door, those of an order to the content of the room of the door, those of an order tell tother from which.

The last time I met Judge Curran, of the motion of this city, who bears a triking personal resemblance to the ex-solicitor general of Quebec, now Judge Curran. I was caught by it once anyself. Coming down King street on evening I spied my friend Moulson, as I supposed, seated in the office of the more of the supposed, seated in the office of the more hands and turning into the hotel shook hands pleasantly with him. The gentleman I marked "It's all right my friend, but I'm not Mr. Moulson." That was my first introduction to Judge Curran—the brilliant Irish-Canadian lawyer and statesman. A few days later I was in Frederican in the office of the Moulson and turning into the hotel shook hands in the office of the more marked "It's all right my friend Moulson, as I supposed, seated in th Aikens on Broadway to buy something. While making the purchase a stout gentleman of English build and complexion passed down the store aisk behind me. The clerk called my attention to him, remarking that he was Governor Flower. In a few minutes the report spread, the shoppers in the store came along in droves looking for Governor Flower, and a crowd besieged the store from the outside. The doors had to be closed and a squad of police summoned to act as an escort for the gentleman to protect him from the friendly enthusiasm of the mob. He protested he wasn't Governor Flower, but no one believed him until one of the firm confilmed the story. It was simply a funny chief of mistaken identity.

weekly review of trade tomorrow will say: Good news predominates in the business world, notwithstanding two somewhat serious drawbacks. Weather conditions have been unsatisfactory at many points, retarding retail distribution and delaying outdoor work, while excessive rain has put many southern planters behind with work in the cotton fields. Still more of a handicap is the strife between wage earner and employer. Manufacturing is exceptionally active in lines not disturbed by strikes, and there is a vigorous movement of goods through rogular channels. Transportation is heavy, as shown by railway earnings in March, 5.7 per cent. larger than last year.
Although speculation has increased very materially, it is still far short of last year's aggregate. Not only pig iron, but bars, billets and structural shapes are also sold so far ahead that new business is comparatively light. Firmness in cotton goods naturally follows the combination of light stocks and the interruption of work at some millis with threatened disturbance at others, together with the higher prices of raw material. In many lines it is no longer possible to secure prompt deliverles and buyers have practically ceased to ask concessions. Jobbers are preparing for the fall trade and duplicate orders sustain a fair volume of current business. Footwear manufacturers have secured a little more business and shops have been able to avoid the reduced time that was feared. Fluctuations were more irregular in corn, which broke sharply here and at the west, but made a partial recovery although still remaining below the best price last month. Wheat moved within narrow limits, varying a fraction according to the preponderance of good or bad corp news. The most definite despatches indicated a slightly lower condition in the southwest, but it is still too early for anything positive. Lower prices stimulated exports for a time, but shipments of wheat and flour from all ports of the United States during the week were only 159,213 bush against

RHYMES OF THE DAY.

Only One Way is Right.

Electric Companies Not Able to Montreal, April 14.—(Special)—Two hundred linemen and other electrical workers went on strike today and the city was partly in darkness tonight. The electric companies feared the men out would tamper with the wires and asked protection from the police. Bookkeepers, clerks and other-office workers were pressed into service cleaning and carboning the lamps, but the companies were not able to cope with the emergency. The men in the motive power houses were not called out.

Brussels, April 14—The day passed here in perfect tranquility. Several meetings were held in the suburbs during the evening. M. Van Der Velde and other Socialist leaders made violent speeches in the vicinity of the Maison Du Peuple, but order was maintained, mainly due to the conspicious absence of the police.
