In Scotland it was for a long time usual to place on a man's tombstone the symbols of his trade. Especially was this the case at Dunblane, in the burial ground of the abbey, it has been found that of those tomb-stones which are from 100 to 200 years old about one-fourth are thus marked. the symbols being in low relief. A sugar cane may be seen as showing the grave of a grocer; an ax and saw, with hammer and nails, occur on the grave of a carpenter; an awl and a hammer on that of a shoemaker. There are many other graves similarly marked.-London Answers

THE BOW AND ARROW.

Archery Said to Be a Recreation of Great Physical Value. In the choice of a man's recreation one should choose that which not only give him sufficient muscular exercise and full respiration, but which will give him also as large an amount of pleasure as possible, for the pleasurableness of an exercise is one test of its value. During his period of recreation a man's care and worry should be completely submerged by the gush of youthful enthusiasm. Only under these conditions does physical exercise yield even its full physical value. But there should be more than the physical consideration entering into the matter of recreation, One's recreation should possess something of an artistic and of recreation. One's recreation should possess something of an artistic and aesthetic value. It should be of such a nature that through participating in it and through love for it one will become a more cultured gentleman. All of these requirements are ideally met in the most historic of games, archery. As to muscular exercise and respiration archery is fully adequate, and especially so because it can be followed to old age. As the muscles strengthen the bow can be adjusted to the increasing strength. As old age approaches proaches and the muscles begin to tire under the arduous work of the younger man the bow can again be fitted to the man, while the muscles themselves and the eye need not lose their cunning. Indeed, it is a noteworthy fact that many of the leading archers of all times have been men of advanced years. In fact, the fascination of the long bow seems to grow stronger in the faithful archer as his years advance, even as Robin Hood, through the lattice of his chamber, shot his last arrow to mark the spot of his grave. proaches and the muscles begin to tire

But to illustrate the nature of the physical exercise which is involved in the pursuit of archery it might be said the pursuit of archery it might be said that in shooting a single York round, which is seventy-two arrows at 100 yards, forty-eight arrows at eighty yards and twenty-four arrows at sixty yards, the archer must walk 2,080 yards if he uses two targets and twice that if he has only one target. If he uses a bow which pulls forty-five pounds, which is the ordinary weeks to which is the ordinary weight for men, he has drawn in all 6,480 pounds. This work has been done by a direct pull work has been done by a direct pull work all the muscles of the back and shoulders in most perfect tonus and forces the most perfect tonus and forces the most perfect respiration. In fact, no form of exercise could surpass archery for the purpose of straightening up stooped shoulders and expanding the collapsed chest and lungs. Nothing can take the place of archery for the man who is confined over a desk in his daily work. But there are other important fea-tures of archery from the purely phy-sical point of view. To make a successful shot with the bow one must bring every muscle of the body under most perfect control and into must per-fect co-ordination with the eye. This factor itself is of important education-al significance—the factor of self control at a trying moment. When the bow is full drawn every muscle must be in the highest tension, the body in absolute equilibrium, the bow held as if in a vise and the point of the arrow on the mark. Then the string must bound from the fingers without a waver or jerk. These are only some of the elements of archery, and there is a life-time of study in them.—Dr. George E. Coghill in Recreation.

SEA CHEST OF CAPT. COOK.

Rare Relic of the Old Sea Pathfinder Treasured In United States.

Capt. Cook's chest, the one which capt. Cooks chest, the one which he carried with him on his voyage of discovery over one hundred years ago, occupies a conspicuous place in the home of Rev. R. Crosby of this village, says a North Branch, Mich., despatch to The Detroit Free Press. It is presumed that this rare old treasure inclosed the chart of the St. Lawrence River when, in 1759, Capt. Minerals In Water Lead or zinc ore can be so finely pulverized that a tablespoonful may be mixed in a bucket of clear water without being visible to the naked eye When thus powdered the particles are so minute that it often takes half an hour for them to settle to the botton of a vessel full of water. This fact makes it evident that a stream may carry large quantities of minerals rich in metals.

Archbishop Bruchesi For Unity as of Centuries Ago.

His Grace Expresses His View of Pro posed Union of Methodist, Presbyterian, Congregational and Other Churches - Proceedings In Metho dist Conference - Committees at Work-Women In the Churches.

Montreal, Sept. 15 .- A notice of motion before committee on missions of the Methodist General Conference stands in the name of C. W. Cate, K.C.,
"That the French work be discontinued."

In connection with this and the general question of the conference, as well as the proposed union of Methodist, Presbyterian, Congregationalist and other churches, Archbishop Bruchesi, Roman Catholic, was yesterday asked the feeling of the church in Quebec, with regard to the Methodist Conference and the proposed union.

Archbishop Bruchesi For Amity.

"It is not a matter in which I desire to interfere, or to say anything," he began. "I do not want to say one word that might be misunderstood. I have great respect for all those gentlemen who are gathered together in other assemblies or churches, for, of course, church means an assembly, but to me it is not a question of churches. I know only one church; I have my own convictions of course and to me there convictions, of course, and to me there convictions, of course, and to me there is only one church."

It was not a question of churches or unity, he continued, for there was but one church established by the Lord. "Ofher sheep I have which are not of this fold," he quoted from St. John or this fold," he quoted from St. John x, 16: "Them also I must bring, and they shall hear my voice, and there shall be one fold and one shepherd." "My desire and prayer every day," he remarked in further conversation,

"is that there shall be one church again ds there was four or five centuries ago." Committees at Work. The conference yesterday was still indisposed, if not unprepared, for work. The committees are in full swing and it was agreed during the aftern give them free play till Monday after-noon, so that business should then be forward enough to take up in full conference.

There was a little ruffle over a proposal of the memorial committee that in the election of the general superin-tendent the book steward, the connex-ional editors, the secretaries for mis-sions, education, superannuation, temperance and young people's societies, perance and young people's societies, the department or committee charged with the work should nominate three or more persons after which any members of conference would have the privilege of nominating any other person. After considerable debate the motion to adopt was lost.

Women In the Church. A promising debate on the status of women in the church was started by the proposal to change "layman" or "laymen" in the discipline to lay member or members.

Dr. Langford feared it would arrest the whole question of union at this stage of the negotiations to make such fundamental change.
Mrs. MacLachlan, Mrs. Radford, Miss Richardson, Mrs. Morkill and Mrs. Luddington, represented the W.C. T. U., the first-named being spokeswoman. Women's work, she de-clared, knew no denominationalism. She hoped it would not be long before her Methodist sisters had, like hersel, a volce in their church management. Deputations were received from the Dominion Alliance and the Bible Society, and votes of thanks were passed

If you travel back and forth into town every day you no doubt read your paper or a magazine on the train. While this is not, indeed, the best practice for the eyes, it seems a pity to waste so much time which might to turned to good account. Much of the reading is due to the jolting of the cars, which continually knocks the printed line out of focus with the eye. This can be in some degree obviated by laying a card or some other object below the line to be read and moving it steadily downward while reading. This acts as a guide to the eye and helps to keep the sight fixed. Those who have tried it say that it wonder fully assists to decrease the difficulty of reading while in motion.
