I dreamed I was with my Antony
And in his arms I lay,
Ah! me the vision has vanished—
Its music has died away—
The flame and the perfume have perished
As that spiked aromatic pastille,
That wound the blue smoke of its odor
Is now but an ashy hill.

Scatter upon me rose leaves—
They cool me after I sleep—
And with sandal odors fan me
Till into my veins they creep.

When he heard my tootsteps near,
And the spotted giraffes fied wildly
In a yellow cloud of fear.
I sucked in the noontide splendor,
Quivering along the glade,
Or panting, yawning and dreaming,
Basked in the tamarisk's shade,
Till I heard my wild mate roaring
As the shadows of night came on,
To brood in the tree's thick branches
And the shadow of sleep was gone.

And unsheathed from my cushione
My curving claws and stretched me,
And wandered my mate to greet;
