A LIFE SAVED
BY TAKING
AYER'S CHERRY
PECTORAL

"Several years ago, I caught a severe cold, attended with a terrible cough that allowed me no rest, either day or night. The doctors pronounced my case hopeless. A friend, learning of my trouble, sent me a bottle of AYER'S Cherry Pectoral. I used it the time I had the whole bottle. I was completely cured, and I believe it saved my life."

SICK

HEADACHE

Don Carlos, who suffered from a constitutional objection to climbing, had elected to remain in the yard below.
Knowing from past experience that the trial was likely to be a lengthy process, he gravely seated himself upon the interior, and prepared to await events.
It should be explained that Don Carlos —not handsome. Neither was he good. But he possessed merits which might not have been patent to the casual observer. In complexion he was black and tan, being neither like a dachshund in the face, while he strongly resembled a greyhound in the figure. His tail, however, it was impossible to classify,
for it belonged to no species or breed.
Owing to his having been dropped by his nurse when a baby, it had a break near the tip which caused it to curl over his back in a coquettish manner far from emphasizing the reality of his character; while its length would have done credit to a cat.

TWO DOGS AND A JURY.

Marguerito Valesquez was a person of some notoriety on the American side of the Texas frontier. There were periods, indeed, when members of his acquaintance, notably the Sheriff's officers, sought his society with an ardent difficulty to withstand. The present was one of those occasions; and although Marguerito had shown some coyness about accepting the urgent invitation extended to him, and moreover given the State officials some heavily exercised before allowing them to deliver it personally, yet he had eventually given away to force of circumstances.

Fortunately for themselves the representatives of the law and order in Jacubaya knew within a hundred miles or so the localities where Marguerito was likely to be found. His natural modesty and reticence, however, prevented him from crossing the Mexican border, where his return had long been awaited with anxiety by certain of his compatriots.
Therefore the chase had been short.

Still, while it lasted, like most of the proceedings in which Marguerito was actively concerned, it had proved full of interest to the persons sharing in it.
But now the object of all these attentions had recognized the uselessness of further resistance, and, feeling that he had done his best, was prepared to rest upon his laurels. Wherein his friend, Don Carlos, agreed with him.

The pair, accompanied by a large proportion of the population, made their way toward the court house, a building which but marginally illustrated the quality of the law despised within. As a matter of fact, before it became a hall of justice, it had been a loft, and access was still gained to it by means of a ladder.
Marguerito, followed by the judge, the jury and the crowd, mounted with impulsive alacrity, and he was shortly occupying a prominent position in the court.

Don Carlos, who suffered from a con-
elected to remain in the yard below.
interior, and prepared to await events.
It should be explained that Don Carlos
a greyhound in the figure. His tail,
however, it was impossible to classify,
for it belonged to no species or breed.
done credit to a cat.

That intelligent animal, as he lay beneath his conqueror, appeared to understand and to be encouraged by the faith reposed in him by his master. He gathered his long legs together, planting them firmly against the enemy's body, and the development of the case was that the bull-mastiff was seen to be taking an entirely involuntary flight through space.

Don Carlos, meanwhile, slowly arose, shook out his tail, and—yawned.
The discomfited interloper, after a short period of meditation in a dust heap, picked himself out of the dirt. He looked back in the act of retreating, glanced at the open gate through which he had entered, and then in a depressed manner he evidently made up his mind that it was time to leave. He accordingly did so, and not until he had slowly lurched out of eight round a sandy corner did he cease to creep up to his master for complacencies. That gentleman naturally something in their native Mexican that was clearly intelligible to his companion, for Don Carlos' eyes said plainly that he found life a satisfactory thing.

With unlooked for docility Marguerito turned to ascend the ladder leading to the loft.

Brought back to everyday life by his movements, judge, jury and audience followed suit, in a silence too blissful for breaking.

The prisoner, impassive as ever, resumed his careless survey of the room, letting his gaze rest longest on the benches occupied by the jury.

The judge took his seat, scrutinized the face of the crowd, and, apparently satisfied by what he read there, cleared his throat and began.

"Gentlemen of the jury," he said, "when we were interrupted by unforeseen circumstances a short time ago, I opined that you were just going to declare that according to the best of your belief the prisoner was innocent of the charge again him."

"You've struck it, judge," unblushingly responded the jury.

The judge frowned down an attempt at speech on the part of the sheriff, and turned to Marguerito.

Prisoner, he said, "you heard the remarks of these gentlemen opposite, so you may take it that the proceeding is concluded. But don't get up to any more of your tricks in this court for it gains little that next time you won't get off so easy. And now what'll you take for the dog?—Pall Mall Budget.

ed no more time, but with an expression of rapture stealing over their faces they made for the ladder, accompanied by the prisoner and the guard.

The Judge, being left alone in the empty loft, frowned severely at the vanishing benches as he said with impassive dignity, "I guess this court will adjourn." Then he tucked up his sleeves and made good time for the yard. A vigorous struggle for the best view took place between Marguerito and himself, without either man being in the least aware of the identity of the person by whom he was jostled. Nor would it have made any difference if he had known, because not even for a free pardon would the accused have consented to forego the enthralling sight on which he was feasting his eyes.

Affairs were just at their most exciting stage. The bull mastiff, it appeared, had drawn quite close to Don Carlos before perceiving his presence. He had then, instead of apologizing for the intrusion, cynically examined Don Carlos' tail, afterward giving vent to an insulting bark. This brought matters to a climax, and in less than it takes to tell, the two dogs were so inextricably mixed up that but for the appendage in question, waving over the scene like a flag of battle, it would have been impossible to distinguish one combatant from the other.

There was no necessity for the haste displayed by the spectator in reaching the seat of war, for the fray promised to be as long as it was sanguinary. No quarter was asked or desired. The stranger possessed a vast amount of staying power, inasmuch as when he once looked hold little short of extracting his teeth made him let go again. But the military tactics of his opponent were new to him, and prevented his getting an opportunity to show what he really could do.

Don Carlos dashed underneath him and sent him sprawling into the mud; he jumped over his back and gave him a performance of his passing, and he buried his front and rear quarters both at the same time, until the bull-mastiff felt that, for all the good he was able to effect, he might as well be a toy-terrier.
The ironical cheers of the crowd incited him to fresh endeavors, and he spent himself in frantic efforts to gain the mastery.

At length, however, he saw a chance.
Making sudden dash while Don Carlos was in the act of executing one of his wonderful leaps, the bull-dog met him in mid-air and at last obtained a grip of the enemy's throat. Both dogs fell to the ground, the stranger savagely worrying his apparently vanquished opponent.

The crowd showed signs of a desire to interfere, but the set of executing one back. "Let 'em alone," he saw—saw—and bet your boots on Carlos."

THE SALARIES AND INCOMES OF RULERS.

There is certainly one very nice feature about being a potentate, and that is the income that comes to the occupant of a lofty place. Besides having all his wants attended to, and a large number of palaces always at his disposal, the Emperor of Russia is said to receive $25,000 a day; the Sultan of Turkey receives $18,000 a day; the Emperor of Austria receives in $10,000 a day; Emperor William has to get along on $5,000 from breakfast to bedtime; Queen Victoria has $35,000 to spend every week, and the President of the United States receives a trifle under a thousand dollars a week, but a great deal of free advertising goes with the office.—

GROWING PREVALENCE OF
BRIGHT'S DISEASE.

Bright's Disease shows itself usually in depression of spirits. Life loses its zest.
Efforts bring as early fatigue. There is loss of appetite; listlessness; sleep fails to refresh. There may, or may not be pain in the region of the kidneys. It is not only astonishing, but alarming the extent to which this disease is seizing the ablest men of the country. The deceptive nature of the trouble is almost skin to that of consumption. Our dearest friends are carried off with it before we are aware of the nature of their disease. The one salvation is to rid the system of the trouble at its inception.
This is being most successfully accomplished by South American Kidney Cure, a medicine that will cure any case of Bright's disease, that has not already signed the death warrant of its victim.
It is a medicine that most completely restores the system of those elements to constitute this disease, working directly on the kidneys.—Sold by E. Lee Street.

CONDENSED DESPATCHES.

Mr. King, ex-director of the Bank of Montreal, died at Monte Carlo Tuesday, aged 73.

A terrific storm, with a heavy fall of snow, has swept over Sicily, Italy, doing a great deal of damage. Four ships are known to have been wrecked.

On board steamer City of Washington, which arrived at New York this morning from Mexico and Havana, were seven ship-wrecked seamen of the Norwegian barque Sorriden, which was wrecked near San Felipe, on the Mexican coast, March 10.

Philip Sidney, second Baron De Lisle and Dudley, died at Durham, Eng., Tuesday, aged 68 years.

Eighteen men were killed by the explosion in the Brancepeth mine at Willing-ton, Durham, Eng., Tuesday.

The Mississippi river is on the rampage.
From Grand Rapids to St. Paul, the river is now eight feet higher than on Sunday. A further rise of two feet will drive the people to the hills. Much damage has already been done.

Emperor William of Germany attended a parade of the Vienna garrison on the Schmelzer ground this morning. The troops numbered 22,000 men and were headed by Emperor Francis Joseph.

Steamer Majestic, from New York, arrived at Queenstown at 7.30 o'clock this morning. She reports having experienced strong northerly gale and high seas which "wrecked her decks. One man, a seaman named Wainwright, was killed on April 10 by being thrown with great violence to the deck when the ship was struck by a tidal wave.

Three hundred miners board for the Yukon are now in at the base of the divide between Cook's Inlet and the Yukon. A fierce snowstorm was raging ten days ago, and the prospects of the men being able to cross the mountains were not only discouraging but it is feared that many will perish.

CATARHAL DEAFNESS OF
TWELVE YEARS STANDING.

CURED BY DR. AGNEW'S CATARRHAL POWDER—AN EXTRAORDINARY
EXPERIENCE.

Catarh nearly always leaves its mark after it. These are frequently results in deafness of the victim. A case in point is that of Capt. Ben Connor, of 189 Berkeley street, Toronto, who was deaf for twelve years from catarrh. No medicine or treatment did him any good, until he procured a bottle of Dr. Agnew's Catarrhal Powder, which gave immediate relief, and continuing to use it, in a short time the deafness was entirely removed. Mr. Connor's friends, who knew the extremity of the malady, are loud in their praise of this medicine; and Capt.
Connor himself will be only too glad to answer all enquiries concerning his case and remarkable cure.

HOW A BEE STINGS.

The sting is, of course, a bee's only weapon, says a writer in the Cosmopolitan. It is not the single spear that it appears to be, but a complex consists of three prongs each beautifully grooved into the others, thus forming a sort of tube through which flows the poison from the sac to which the sting is attached. As soon as the point of the sting enters the flesh, two of the prongs, which are barbed, begin to work forward alternately. When one has been thrust forward, its barbs catch in the flesh and hold while the other is being thrust forward, and this motion, which also pumps the poison from the poison sac, is continued until the sting has penetrated to its full length. The sting, accompanied by its appendages, is almost invariably torn from the bee, and remains in the flesh of the unfortunate victim. Unfortunate bee, too, as the loss of its sting is eventually followed by death! Hence it can be said that a bee literally defends its home with its life. It is also well to remember that a bee seldom uses its sting except in defence of its home.
Out in the fields, lifting from flower to flower, a bee is the most harmless creature in existence. If one strays into a building, there is no danger that it will sting the inmate; its only thought is to again find its way out.

RHEUMATISM IS STILL BEING
CURED IN FROM ONE TO THREE DAYS
BY SOUTH AMERICAN RHEUMATIC CURE—MORE TESTIMONY.

Mr. Z. A. Van Luyck, Governor of the County of Cook, Ill., writes:— "My wife has been a great sufferer from rheumatism for some time past. The disease attacked the limbs and was wearing them out of shape. The pain was most excruciating. She could not get anything to cure her. Mr. Hoffman, druggist of this town, recommended South American Rheumatic Cure. The first few doses gave my wife perfect relief. To-day after taking four bottles of the remedy, she is certain that the
