

CANADIANS AT THE UNVEILING

Thirteenth Regiment Had Place of Honor in Procession.

300,000 People Enjoyed the Canadian Day Proceedings.

Canadian Soldiers Everywhere Received With Enthusiasm.

Hamilton's crack infantry regiment, the Thirteenth, and its splendid band cut quite a proud figure in the doings of Canadian Day at the Buffalo Old Home Week celebration. So also did the Seventh Fusiliers of London. Speaking of the Canadian regiments, the Courier says:

Soon the large band of the Seventh Fusiliers, Royal Canadian Militia, of London, Ont., playing "The British Grenadiers," passed by. The band presented an unusually fine appearance and consisted of fifty musicians, all large of stature and clad in review uniform. Following the band came the bugle and drum corps of thirty-one members.

Then the soldiers real, headed by Lieut-Colonel Frank Reid and aides Majors Campbell and Hayes, mounted; then the infantry. The soldiers from the other side of the border well merited the applause they received. The 7th marched five hundred strong, in column formation, with the color bearers carrying two banners, one of that of the regiment, the Union Jack of Great Britain, with the regimental crest, and the other a yellow flag, with the regimental crest. The uniform, always attractive for parade service, consisted of the scarlet tunic with blue facings, with the crest of the regiment on the tunic, blue serge trousers with a red stripe. The bugles were ornamented with a crest of the regiment. On the officers' uniforms were gold lace facings. The marching was true to time, and the Fusiliers well represented Canada. The regiment had its stretcher corps in line as well as the signal corps.

Next another interval, and then the other visiting Canadian Regiment, the 13th Royal Canadian Regiment of Hamilton. And this regiment also was a credit to the people over the border. The men marched with precision, and wore a uniform similar to the one worn by the Fusiliers and were out just as strong in numbers. The regiment was headed by its exceptional band of thirty pieces and bugle and drum corps numbering forty-eight. The commander was Lieut-Colonel E. E. Wentworth Moore, who had for his aides Majors Sidney C. Mearns and Fred. B. Ross, mounted, and then came the various company regiments marching with a true military tread to the music of the band, amid the applause of the spectators.

The parade was necessarily a short one, but met with approbation because of its distinctly military aspect and but whetted the popular appetite for the larger parade to-day, when the same companies will be in line augmented by additional regulars and the local militia companies.

At the conclusion of the parade the 13th Regiment went to the 6th Army, where the visitors will be quartered. The Fusiliers went to the Front and then to the 74th Army.

It is estimated that 300,000 people enjoyed the events of the day.

McKinley Unveiling.
Buffalo, Sept. 5.—(Special).—To-day was McKinley Day, the chief feature being the unveiling of the McKinley Monument.

Two battalions of the 12th United States Infantry, under command of Major C. H. Barth, led the parade. The 6th Regiment, under command of Col. S. M. Welch, had the next place in the line, and Lieut-Col. E. E. Moore and the 13th Regiment, of Hamilton, the next place. The 74th Regiment, under command of Col. G. C. Fox, followed, with the Seventh Fusiliers, under command of Lieut-Col. F. A. Reed, bringing up the end of the parade.

The members of the monument commission had places in the procession between the 13th Regiment and the 74th Regiment.

Arriving at the monument the ceremony was opened with prayer by the Rt. Rev. William D. Walker, Bishop of the Episcopal Diocese of Western New York. Mayor James N. Adam, Hon. Harlan J. Swift, Department Commander of the G. A. R. and Mrs. Donald McLean, Vice-President of the National Society, Daughters of the American Revolution, delivered addresses.

The monument was unveiled by the Rev. Charles H. Colton, Bishop of Buffalo, closed the ceremonies with benediction.

WIFE SUSPECTED.
Taken in Charge as Result of Husband's Suspicious Death.

Cleveland, O., Sept. 4.—Developments in the investigation into the death of John J. Phillips, coal operator, broker, banker and clubman, came thick and fast to-day, and took a sensational turn late this afternoon, when Mrs. Phillips, his widow, was taken into custody.

Mrs. Phillips has been in a highly nervous state since the tragedy Monday morning, after it was said that her husband had been shot and mortally wounded by a burglar. This afternoon she collapsed and was not able to attend the funeral.

SAW REPORT OF HIS DEATH.
A Peculiar Case of Mistaken Identity at Woodstock.

Woodstock, Sept. 4.—A local newspaper last night published a story identifying the unknown man who recently died in the Woodstock Hospital as Jos. McLean, a Toronto printer. McLean, however, was at work in The Sentinel-Review office this morning and was surprised at the report of his death. McLean came to Woodstock recently from Toronto, where he has relatives.

The Daily Fashion Hint.

Suit of Grey Cloth.

Deep grey cloth is used for this suit, which is embroidered on the front and sleeves with an irregular design done with coarse grey silk, matched by the buttons and loops. The front of the coat finishes with the lower buttons and fastens with a small hook and loop before the larger ones are buttoned. The vest showing below is pearl grey with silver buttons, and the bow on the hat is pearl grey, fastened under a single pink velvet rose.

IN THE WORLD OF AMUSEMENT

Porter J. White's big scenic production of "Faust" will be seen at the Grand to-morrow night. Olga Verne, an emotional actress of ability, is to appear as Marguerite, and William Richards will assume the role made famous by Lewis Morrison. The company is said to be an excellent organization, and the scenic and electrical effects are complete. Altogether an interesting production of this famous play will be given.

At Bennett's Theatre.
The bill at Bennett's continues to please the large crowds which attend the theatre. The audiences now know what to expect, and when the laughter-mongers arrive they are greeted with the warmest applause. Marion and Pearl, are the quaintest brace of humorists seen in this city for many a day, their sayings tickling everyone. The Althea twins are a dainty pair, with a fine song, which they sing together under an umbrella covered with electric lights. Their contortionist feats are marvelous, particularly their human cartwheel stunts. McInnis and Hill are getting all that is due to them in the way of appreciation. Their aerial act is a hair-raiser. The Finneys are, perhaps, the most anticipated item in the bill, and their tank performance will long be remembered as one of the best in vaudeville. Virginia Earle and company, in their farce, "A Midnight Mistake"; Lamont's circus; Bill Dillon, the humorous songster; Jessica Cree, the Vassar girl whistler; and the Bennettograph, are maintaining the interest they made on the opening night.

Manager Driscoll has secured a very strong bill for next week. Among the strong acts that of Carroll Johnson, the famous singer and monologue artist, may be singled out for mention now. He has a company of charming pickaninnies and a number of melodious songs.

At the Savoy.
Advanced vaudeville at the Savoy Theatre continues to please large audiences. While the show throughout is a strong and thoroughly enjoyable one, Staley's Nightingale, the musical comedy which made such a hit on opening night; the Italian Opera Trio, one of variety's finest singing acts, and the Goltz Trio, a splendid European acrobatic act, are among the best liked features. The mechanical effects on which the success of the Staley act depend, are well worth seeing. Some idea of their value is given when it is known that the originator refused an offer of $5,000 for the trunk which when deposited on the stage immediately is transformed into a floor mat, revealing an upholstered chair and one of the performers seated on it. All the elements that go to make up a successful vaudeville bill are found in the Savoy show this week, and a capacity house is promised again for both performances on Saturday.

A show that will be up to the high standard is guaranteed next week, when Florence Modena and company will be seen in a new skit, entitled, "Bargain Mad." Miss Modena was here last season in a sketch entitled "For Reform," and needs no recommendation to Hamilton theatre goers.

At Summers' Theatre.
Patrons of Mountain Park Theatre, at the head of the East End Incline, will miss their old favorites after next Saturday, when the Summers Stock Company will give the final performance of the season. The play this week is giving excellent satisfaction to large crowds and will no doubt draw large audiences during the remainder of the week.

"Kerry Gow" on Saturday.
No drama has lived so long consecutively as beautiful "Kerry Gow," the sweet love story of Dan O'Hara, the village blacksmith, and the pretty colleen, Norah Drew. "Kerry Gow" was written by Fred. Marsden, a past master in stage craft, and is the play which brought Joseph Murphy both fame and fortune. Manager U. D. Newell puts "Kerry Gow" before the public this season, and when this delightful and refreshing play is seen at the Grand on Saturday next Bernard Daly will appear as the hero.

Next Week's Shows.
The famous Elm City Quartette has been especially engaged for the Grace Cameron Opera Company, and will render many pleasing vocal selections during the performance of "Little Dolly Dimples." One of their biggest hits is entitled, "The Girl That I'd Call Mine." Miss Cameron and "Little Dolly Dimples" will be the attraction at the Grand a week from Saturday.

There will be a chance for everyone to spend a big evening of laugh when "Sis in New York" comes to the Grand on Wednesday night. Sis herself needs no introduction, and the fact that the same distinguished cast which has always been with her is coming this time, leaves only the new play to talk about.

Hall Caine's "Christian."
Word comes from London that Hall Caine's "Christian," redramatized by him for the purpose of pointing a moral, is likely to adorn a tale of police interference. The critics are all severe in their denunciation of a tawdry exhibition of women in procession on the streets as representatives of what Rudyard Kipling called "the oldest profession on earth."

"It is not impressive," declares one critic, "and it is too vulgar to be comic, although there are a great many points at which the dramatist is guilty of unconscious humor."

Mr. Caine is wrought up over the vice parade of real London after the lights are turned on, and he believes he has a mission to adorn a tale of police interference. The critics are all severe in their denunciation of a tawdry exhibition of women in procession on the streets as representatives of what Rudyard Kipling called "the oldest profession on earth."

presentatives at close range. Just what good he expects to accomplish is not clear, and as for the problem he attempts to solve, Solomon gave that up many centuries ago.

Mr. Caine is a conscientious writer, and at times an entertaining one, but when he poses as a sociologist he shows forth a woful deficiency in those practical views of life which recognize certain conditions as almost inevitable, without anywise approving of sin, whether carried on in secret, paraded on the street, or reflected lamely by men and women on the stage.

"My Wife's Family."

"My Wife's Family" was the bill at the Grand last night, and it didn't get any warmer welcome than "the wife's family" is said by the funny paper writers to get at home. The audience was not large or enthusiastic, although it was appreciative. There were some good musical numbers rendered in the course of the farce, which were appreciated. Some of the most enjoyable songs were "I'd Like to Take You Home With Me," by Edna Ward; "Keep the One in the Middle," by Appleton and Perry; "Strolling," by Francis Vaughan.

The comedy was fairly well put on, the company being capable and large, and the staging was good.
