THE STANLEY FAIR.
The annual fair was held in the society's ground Oct. 10th. The weather proved unfavorable, and there was not a large attendance as last year, but the showing excelled all past exhibits in roots. For example, Dr. J. Griffiths exhibited 12 hybrid turkeys, aggregate weight 288 pounds, and Councillor Fullerton one weighing 28 pounds.

The show of horses was above the average, and of cattle up to the average. No many sheep were exhibited, but they were of good quality. The hogs were good specimens. Fruit was above the average, and the butter, which was excellent, was purchased by eager buyers on the spot.

The judges were as follows:
On horses—J. B. Grievies, Isaac Peabody, James Boyd.

Cattle—John Boyle, Robert Scott. Sheep—Edward Sanson, Edward McAlon.

HE CALLED OUT THE RESERVES
How an Excited Harlem Man Sent the Police Rushing Through the Streets.

An energetic citizen bounded breathless into the Court House at Sylvan place, New York, at 6.30 o'clock Sunday evening and made a mad plunge for the telephone box.

"Hello! hello!" he bawled as he twisted the handle of the bell. He twisted so violently that "central" responded with a start.

"Hello! Hello!" gasped the energetic citizen. "Gimme police—local station—gimme Headquarters. Busy? Oh, bless; well, get 'em quick. Two men cuttin' each other's pieces!"

"This Headquarters?" spluttered the energetic one a few seconds later. "Send up quick—men killing each other—two cut and—"

Headquarters heard a little more, but seeing that the call came from the building in which is the Harlem prison at once concluded that there was a riot there and that the prisoners were cutting each other or the keepers.

Then the ticker in the east 129th street police station began to whir as if the electrical storm were central over New York, and Sergeant Holbert, half falling of his chair, learned from the rapidly moving indicator that there was a riot or something in the Harlem prison.

Whang! went the bell for the reserve platoon, which was taking its Sunday ease in the back room. The next moment Roundamen Schlotan and Woodbridge and fourteen men came tumbling in.

"Get down to the Harlem
