Student Spy Shown Mercy by Britain.

New York Herald Draws Striking Contrast Between Treatment of Kenneth Triest and of Edith Cavell.

An instance of the human conduct of Great Britain's government in dealing with a spy comes as a distinct contrast to the murderous cruelty of the Germans in the case of Miss Edith Cavell, head nurse of a hospital, who was put to death in the gray dawn in a Brussels prison despite the fervent pleas of the American and Spanish ministers. The Herald has learned that Kenneth G. Triest, whose father, Wolfgang Gustav Triest, almost abandoned hope of saving his son's life after the slaying of Miss Cavell, is to be returned to the United States, in care of his father.

All that was asked by the British authorities was that Mr. Triest, sr., whose home is at No. 970 Park avenue, should go to England under a safe conduct from the British Embassy in Washington and take his son away. This charitable decision has been communicated by the British Embassy to the State Department in Washington.

Two countries' ministers pleaded for Miss Cavell in the very same city in which she was shot to death. In the case of young Triest, whose guilt was palpable, a plea from Theodore Roosevelt, 3,500 miles away, did much to save the young man and give him his liberty. All that the parents of young Triest, who is nineteen years old and was a Princeton University student, hoped for was to get the death sentence commuted on account of his alleged feeble mentality. But even that hope was swept away when it was learned that alienists had declared that Triest was not mentally irresponsible.

Posed as Canadian. He had posed as a Canadian, enlisted in the British navy, taken the oath, and then, it was learned through intercepted letters, had written of his idea of trying to get to Germany and aid his father's native land by giving away a secret code and other details of the service he had learned. Thursday night Mr. Triest, sr., almost wept when he was informed that

The British authorities were acting in an utterly un-German manner. He was told that he "could leave as soon as he wished and go to England under a safe conduct and bring back his son." It is said that he could hardly believe the news to be true, for he expected hourly to receive word that his son had been convicted by a court martial and sentenced to be shot in the Tower of London. When the shooting of Miss Cavell was blazed over the world, Mr. Triest thought that there was little chance for any spy in England, let alone his son. "England," said an American who was interested in the case, "has played a clean, square game, and it is a remarkable contrast to what Germany has done. You know England is in a state of war, and to let a young man go free because of supplications is a great something to Great Britain's credit. Young Triest was acting directly against England as a spy who had taken the oath of allegiance. Miss Cavell was doing what she could for wounded soldiers and aiding them to go back to their respective countries."

Raced for Doctor

WHEN KING WAS HURT.

Military Policeman Galloped for Two Miles, But Could Not Find One. London, Nov. 5.—In a letter to his father, published in the Daily Mail, Corporal Fred Clark describes his futile gallop in search of a doctor for the King when His Majesty's accident occurred.

"The King was out here Thursday inspecting the troops just behind the firing line. He met with a serious accident. I was within twenty yards of him when it happened. He was inspecting certain regiments, and when he had finished the men gave him a cheer and the King's horse reared up and came over with him. The horse started kicking when the King was on the ground. Several staff officers ran to his assistance, got the horse off him, picked the King up and then laid him down.

"One of the staff officers then ran up to me and said: 'Go and find a doctor. Go like hell in the night!'"

A military policeman has written to his father this description of the accident: "After the fall, he writes, the King's horse started kicking. Staff officers ran and got the animal off the King and one of them sent the writer of the letter for a doctor.

The policeman galloped for two miles, but could find no doctor, all being in the field with the regiments, and he had to return with none. The officers then lifted the King, who was still lying on the ground, into an automobile, and the machine carried him away.

25 cents Destroys Your Dandruff and Stops Falling Hair

Save your hair! Make it thick, wavy and beautiful—try this!

Thin, brittle, colorless and scraggy hair is mute evidence of a neglected scalp; of dandruff—that awful scurf. There is nothing so destructive to the hair as dandruff. It robs the hair of its lustre, its strength and its very life; eventually producing a feverishness and itching of the scalp, which if not remedied causes the hair roots to shrink, loosen and die—then the hair falls out fast. A little Danderine to-night—now—any time—will surely save your hair.

Get a 25-cent bottle of Knowlton's Danderine from any drug store or toilet counter, and after the first application your hair will take on that life, lustre and luxuriance which is so beautiful. It will become wavy and fluffy and have the appearance of abundance, an incomparable gloss and softness; but what will please you most will be after just a few weeks' use, when you will actually see a lot of fine, downy hair—new hair—growing all over the scalp.

Get American Advice in Rule of Poland.

Germans Engage Dr. Kellogg to Make Suggestions as to Work of Relief.

Berlin, Nov. 6.—Dr. Vernon C. Kellogg, Director of the Commission for the Relief of Belgium, has arrived in Berlin. Dr. Kellogg is going to Warsaw, where he will spend a week in investigating conditions preparatory to making recommendations to the Warsaw Government for Polish relief. Dr. Kellogg is making the journey at the request of the German authorities in Warsaw and the German General Army Headquarters, who have arranged the visit without the knowledge of either the Berlin Government or James W. Gerard, the American Ambassador. Dr. Kellogg, after spending some days in the City of Warsaw studying statistics, plans to make a tour of Poland and observe the actual conditions, after which he will formulate suggestions for acceptance or rejection by the Germans. Dr. Kellogg says there is no intention on the part of Americans to duplicate in Poland their relief work in Belgium and that in the Polish situation he has been called, merely as a specialist. He is accompanied by an officer who for months has been doing administrative work in France and has been transferred to Poland to continue his efforts there.

Mr. Roosevelt's Tribute

The Navy, the excellent official organ of the Navy League, gives in its October issue a most interesting account of a speech made by Mr. Roosevelt at Government House, Victoria, British Columbia, where he was lately a guest. The speech, we are told, was like the man—burning, direct, and to the point:

"First of all, he made it clear to his audience that he was, in no feeble manner, heart and soul with the Allies and their just cause. That which seemed to have impressed him most of all in the history of this war was the splendid elan with which the people of all the 'Dominions over Seas had rallied to the Mother Country. 'The people of Canada,' said he, 'and, indeed, of all the Dominions beyond the Seas, have advanced immeasurably in the affection and respect of the way in which they have rallied to the support of the grand old Motherland in the hour of her trial. With tremendous vigor Mr. Roosevelt declared that there could be no more speaking evidence of the solidarity of the Empire, no finer tribute to the statesmanship of Great Britain, no more impressive vindication of the justice of her cause than the unswerving loyalty and devotion of each and every part of the Empire in this great crisis. It seemed to him that the magnificent spirit of self-sacrifice and co-operation evinced by the whole Empire at this hour was at once the highest expression of a free people fighting in a just cause, and an unanswerable reply to the allegations of the enemy.'"

Card Combinations.

Some Figures of Interest to Card Players.

In an ordinary deck of fifty-two playing cards the total number of possible hands, each hand containing five cards, is more than two and a half million, or to be precise, 2,598,969 possible hands of five cards are to be found in the deck. These hands consist of: Flush sequences 40, fours of a kind 620, full hands 3,744, common flushes 5,108, common sequences 10,552, threes of a kind 54,912, two pairs 123,552, single pairs 1,098,240, other hands, 1,302,540; total hands, 2,598,969.

The "other hands" consist of hands which are below a pair, hands which count only the high card and are beaten by a pair of deuces. The probabilities of receiving a specified poker hand in the original deal are as follows: Straight flush, 1 in 65,000; fours, 1 in 4,164 deals; full, 1 in 693 deals; straight, 1 in 254 deals; three, 1 in 45 deals; two pair, 1 in 20 deals; one pair, 1 in 13 deals. If you wish to discover the chances of filling a hand you will find it easy. With your original five cards there are forty-seven left, and your chances are forty-seven to whatever are left of the kind you wish. In other words, say you have a pair of aces, that leaves two aces still outside your hand, two chances out of forty-seven. If you have three tens there is one left, and your chances of getting it are one to forty-seven. For an immediate straight your chances are four in forty-seven. For an open-ended straight your chances are eight. Drawing to three of a kind you have one chance in forty-seven of getting the fourth.

German Officers Protest

But Navy Department Won't Grant Shore Leave to Men of Interned Ships.

Washington, Nov. 9.—German officers on the interned naval auxiliary cruisers Kronprinz Wilhelm and Prinz Eitel Friedrich have complained to the Navy Department against their continued confinement, which is the result of the decision of that department to permit no more leave of absence to officers on those vessels on parole on account of the disappearance mysteriously of eight officers of the Kronprinz and the Eitel. It was learned that several applications of the officers for shore leave had been refused.

Despite the protest of the German officers it is learned that it is the present intention of the Navy Department to continue indefinitely in force the order which directs Rear Admiral Beatty, commandant of the Norfolk Navy Yard, not to grant further leave of absence to the German officers.

The officers asserted that their paroles would be observed. As the men who disappeared on the Eclipse were officers, it was decided not to take any more chances.

Should the Duke of Norfolk ever pay a visit to the front a curious position would be created. For his Grace is the Constable of the Realm, and, strictly speaking, when he is with the King's forces overseas he is ipso facto in supreme command.

Mr. Lloyd George has a curious looking mascot affixed to the bonnet of his motor-car. It takes the form of a two-inch aeroplane shell—not a miniature or a copy, but the actual thing.
